LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, D. C., December 23, 1933.

SIR: I transmit herewith Volume II of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Distribution. This volume presents statistics on wholesale distribution in the form of State reports, which also give separate data for all cities having a population of 5,000 or more. The United States Summary presented herein includes the statistics for counties.

The census of distribution, which was taken in 1930 in conformity with the act providing for the Fifteenth Decennial Census, approved June 18, 1929, covers the establishments in operation at the beginning of the year 1930 and their operations during the calendar year 1929. The results of this census are contained in 3 volumes, as follows: Volume I (Parts 1, 2, and 3), Retail Distribution by States, with statistics for counties and cities and a Summary for the United States; Volume II, Wholesale Distribution by States, with statistics for cities and a Summary for the United States, including county statistics; Volume III, Special Trade Reports on retail and wholesale distribution and the distribution of Agricultural Commodities—based on commodities handled and/or functional operations.

A census of the construction industry and census of hotels were taken in conjunction with the census of distribution, and the results are contained in separate volumes on each of these subjects. A volume entitled "Distribution of Sales of Manufacturing Plants" was also published.

The collection and compilation of these statistics and the preparation of this volume were under the supervision of Robert J. McFall, chief statistician for distribution, and W. A. Ruff, assistant chief statistician, and under the direction of Theodore N. Beckman, of the Ohio State University, temporarily employed in the Bureau of the Census as an expert in the presentation and analysis of wholesale data, assisted by Nathanael H. Engle and C. E. Warner, jr.

W. M. STEUART,
Director of the Census.

Hon. ROY D. CHAPIN,
Secretary of Commerce.

TABLE FOR INDIVIDUAL STATES

The statistics for each State are presented in a series of 13 standard tables. The subjects covered by the State tables are the same as the list of tables appearing under the heading "Detailed tables for the United States," except Table 12. The title of Table 12 in the State section of this report is "Number of establishments for cities having 20,000 population and over." The page on which each table is to be found for any given State is shown in the tabular statement below.

CHAPTER I—GENERAL ANALYSIS OF THE WHOLESALE FIELD

INTRODUCTION

This volume presents statistics of wholesale trade in the United States derived from the first Census of Distribution, which was taken as a part of the Fifteenth Decennial Census. The data were collected in 1930 and cover business activities during the year 1929. The volume contains a series of uniform tables by kind-of-business classifications and by types of operation for the United States and for States, arranged alphabetically. The material was first published in a series of State bulletins, one for each State, supplemented by a summary bulletin for the United States; these bulletins are bound together to make the present volume.

Scope of wholesale distribution.—This census embraces all establishments which were engaged in the purchase, sale, or distribution of goods on a wholesale basis. In addition to wholesalers of the conventional type, the census covers wholesalers rendering limited services, such as desk jobbers or drop shippers and cash-and-carry wholesalers, and the whole range of organizations engaged in wholesale trade or operating on a wholesale basis, and performing wholesale functions, including brokers, commission merchants, chain-store warehouses, manufacturers' sales branches, selling agents, etc. The term has also been used to include assemblers and country buyers of farm products, such as elevators, cooperative marketing associations, and the like. While brokers, commission merchants, manufacturers' sales branches, chain-store warehouses, and country buyers of farm products are in many respects unlike wholesale merchants, they perform wholesale functions in general and have been classed in the wholesale field. Concerns selling goods to such industrial consumers as manufacturing plants, public utilities, oil-well companies, mining concerns, railroads, and the like are also regarded as establishments engaged in wholesale trade. Thus, for census purposes, the wholesale field covers virtually all merchandising concerns with the exception of retail establishments.

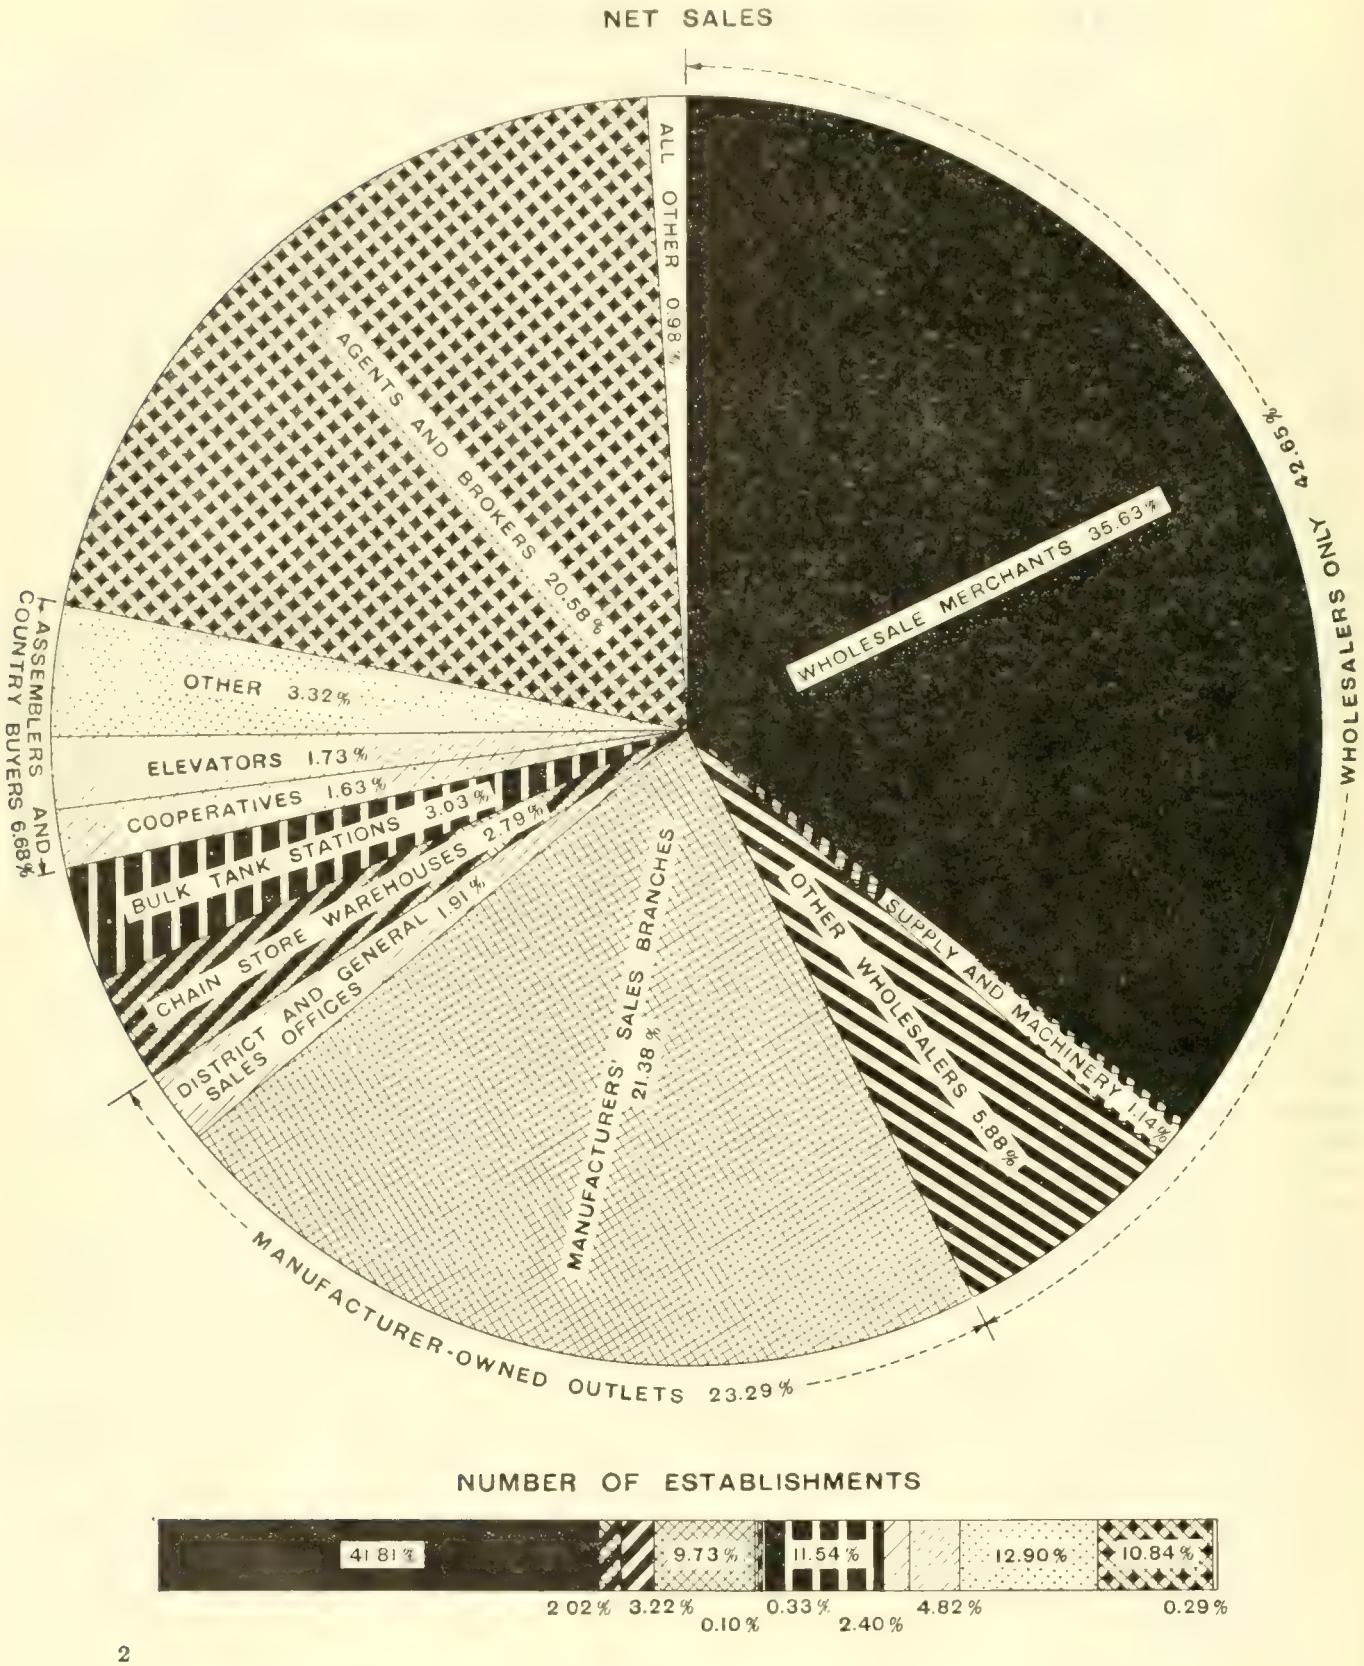
Canvass based on establishments.—A wholesale distribution establishment, for census purposes, is a place of business where goods are sold or distributed on a wholesale basis. It may be in the form of a store which does not generally sell to the public, a distributing warehouse, an office, or part of an office, as when the office is shared with other similar organizations. The Census of Distribution was taken on the basis of establishments in order to facilitate the canvass and to make it possible to present data by geographic areas. A separate report was required for each establishment regardless of whether or not it was owned or operated as part of a larger business organization.

It should be remembered that the census included many establishments which did not carry stocks of merchandise, but merely operated an office or other place of business from which sales were made on a wholesale basis, the goods being shipped direct from a manufacturing plant or some other point of assembly, storage, or production. A large part of the manufacturers' sales branches included in the census did not carry stocks, nor did many establishments selling on a commission basis, such as brokers, manufacturers' agents, and selling agents.

Kinds of wholesale business not included.—The census does not include statistics on wholesale peddlers and others who maintain no places of business, since the canvass was based on establishments or physical business units; nor does the census include establishments engaged purely in the performance of services rather than in the distribution of commodities, as exemplified by advertising agencies, cotton gins and compresses, brokers in securities and commodity changes, and real estate brokers and dealers. Only where substantial quantities of goods were sold at wholesale by such establishments were reports required on the appropriate forms. Finally, it does not include the wholesale sales of manufacturers which were made directly from their manufacturing plants or the wholesale sales of agricultural producers, such as nurserymen, unless those sales were made through an establishment maintained independently of the producing plant or plants.

Method of taking the census.—The Census of Distribution was taken by enumerators who personally visited each establishment engaged in wholesale or retail trade and secured reports on the appropriate schedule forms. In the rural districts and places having less than 10,000 inhabitants the field work was done by the enumerators engaged on the Censuses of Population and Agriculture. In cities having 10,000 inhabitants or more special enumerators were appointed to take the Censuses of Manufactures and Distribution. Four forms of schedules were used to canvass establishments engaged in wholesale trade Copies of these schedule forms appear in the appendix

CHART I.—WHOLESALE TRADE, BY TYPE OF ESTABLISHMENT



NUMBER OF ESTABLISHMENTS

Wholesale food products schedule—Form 8.—This schedule was used to canvass all wholesale distributors of food products in cities having 10,000 inhabitants or more.

General wholesale schedule—Form 10.—This form was used to canvass all wholesale establishments (except food products stores and automobile establishments) in cities having 10,000 inhabitants or more.

Automobile schedule—Form 22.—Reports were secured on this form for all wholesale distributors of new and used automobiles. This schedule was also used to canvass retail establishments selling automobiles, automobile tires and accessories, and gasoline filling stations.

Combined retail and wholesale schedule—Form 14.—This form was used to canvass all retail and wholesale establishments in places having less than 10,000 inhabitants.

Importance of Distribution.—The importance of merchandise distribution in our economic system is generally conceded. Some of the most perplexing problems of our present-day order are those relating directly or indirectly to the marketing of goods. The conditions prevailing prior to the twentieth century were largely accountable for the neglect of distribution and its problems. The demand for most products, until the present century, was far ahead of the supply. Consequently, the problem of the times was how to produce goods in sufficient quantities to satisfy the apparently insatiable wants of the consumer. Much time was therefore given to the study of production methods and efficiency. Besides, there was little overlapping in the territories of manufacturers and distributors, most of whom operated in local markets.

With the development of transportation facilities, however, competition among producers and distributors of similar goods increased by leaps and bounds, thus presenting real problems in selling. Furthermore, because of important inventions and increased production efficiency, the supply of many products has caught up with the demand and has, in fact, largely exceeded it.

The increased competition, coming from the overlapping of territories and from a supply in excess of effective demand, has resulted in the branding of goods, advertising, aggressive selling, and many other activities, some of which have been carried beyond the point of profitable returns. So much waste in distribution has resulted that business leaders of every type have come to the conclusion that in order to distribute goods in the most effective and most economical manner it is now necessary to base marketing activities on facts and figures concerning conditions of supply, demand factors, and marketing institutions and their operation.

The growing interest manifested in distribution is evidenced by the establishment and development of colleges of commerce; bureaus of business research in connection with universities; the multiplication of advertising agencies; and market analyses and investigations conducted by trade associations, congressional committees, and individual economists. The Census of Distribution is the most recent and probably the most comprehensive of all single efforts made in the field of distribution for the purpose of ascertaining the nature of the distribution mechanism, its component parts, and how it operates. It is hoped that the Census of Distribution will provide for the first time a fairly complete picture of the complicated marketing system which has developed and evolved over a long period of time. Knowledge of this should lead toward substantial improvements in the movement of goods from producer to consumer.

WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTION IN ITS BROADER ASPECTS

The volume and status of wholesale trade have long been considered a most significant barometer of general business conditions. Yet no clear definition or conception of the term "wholesale trade" or "wholesale distribution" is to be found. Even the scientific organizations and bureaus which issue wholesale price indices have shown widely different interpretations of the term, for the most part leaving without definition a broad twilight zone which may be regarded as "no man's land."

For census purposes, the distinction between wholesale and retail trade, when used in a broad sense, as indicated in Chapter II, is that based primarily on the status of the purchaser and secondarily on the manner in which the establishments operate. Theoretically all sales made to ultimate or home consumers who buy goods for their own use are retail sales while all other sales, whether made to retailers, to wholesalers, to institutions, or to manufacturers who use the goods for further processing or as equipment, are wholesale transactions. According to this conception all of the following types of sales or transactions fall within the province of wholesaling:

1. Sales made directly by manufacturers or through their sales branches to wholesalers and to other types of wholesale middlemen.
2. Sales to retailers of all kinds.
3. Sales to restaurants and hotels.
4. Sales to manufacturers, mines, oil well companies, fisheries, railroads, public utilities, and Government departments.
5. Sales to barbers in the form of supplies and equipment. The same applies to all sales of equipment and supplies by so-called supply houses, so long as such equipment and supplies are not purchased by ultimate consumers for their own use.
6. Sales of laboratory and professional equipment and supplies to professional men such as doctors and dentists.

7. Sales of building materials to contractors.

8. All operations and activities of middlemen who in some way aid in the transfer of title to goods when such goods are not sold to ultimate or individual consumers. In this group are naturally included brokers, resident buyers, purchasing agents, selling agents, manufacturers' agents, and the like.

9. All purchases of farm products for resale to others than individual consumers, irrespective of whether such purchases are made direct from the farmers or from middlemen.

Gross volume of wholesale trade.—When treated in the light just outlined the total volume of goods sold at wholesale during the year 1929 amounted to approximately $82,000,000,000, priced at f. o. b. point of production or import. As shown on Chart II and Table I the total volume of goods produced in the United States during the year 1929 for distribution and sale amounted to $79,133,891,000. This figure includes raw materials, semimanufactured goods, and finished products, counted separately each time they were sold. Consequently, there is a considerable amount of duplication in values, particularly in the case of manufactured goods. It is estimated that, while the gross value of manufactures during 1929 was $70,434,863,443, their net value amounted to but $47,392,000,000 (Gross value − [semi-manufactures + manufactured fuels purchased + cost of contract work] = net value).[1] For the purpose of determining the total volume of trade, every transaction must be counted, even though several successive transfers of title may involve the same goods. Utility is added to goods, as expressed in enhanced prices which they command, at each successive stage of their movement through the channels of distribution.

Of the $79,133,891,000 of goods which were produced in 1929 for distribution, manufactured products constituted 80.98 per cent; farm products, 12.82 per cent; products of mines and quarries, 3.02 per cent; crude petroleum production, 1.62 per cent; products of forests, 1.39 per cent; products of fishing, 0.13 per cent; and products of hunting and trapping, 0.03 per cent. To this must be added $4,625,145,000 worth of goods imported during the year, bringing up the total value of goods produced in the United States for distribution and those imported to $83,759,036,000.

Since, however, manufacturers reported direct sales to home consumers (which are retail transactions) of $1,553,367,000, this amount must be deducted from the $83,759,036,000, leaving $81,882,598,000 as the value of goods distributed on a wholesale basis. Of this amount, $5,425,699,000 worth of goods were exported, leaving $76,456,899,000 of goods for domestic distribution, on a wholesale basis, with the exception of a relatively small but unknown amount which farmers sold direct to individual home consumers.

WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTION IN ITS NARROWER SENSE

Conventional conception.—The usual or popular conception of wholesale distribution or of wholesale trade, which may be regarded as more or less conventional, refers to the sales of service wholesalers made to retailers. Similarly, the term wholesaler is generally applied to the wholesale merchant who sells to the retailer. According to this conception there were 70,953 such establishments in the United States in 1929 doing a volume of business of $24,689,811,423, of which $4,355,354,282 consisted of sales to industrial consumers and to ultimate consumers, leaving $20,334,457,141 probably sold to retailers, subject to a certain amount of duplication as in the case of one wholesaler selling goods to another wholesaler. Occasionally some of the newer types of wholesalers may be included in this popular concept, as well as the larger wholesalers who sell to smaller wholesalers.

Census use of the term "Wholesale Distribution."—As pointed out in Chapter II, it was necessary, for census purposes, to delimit the field of wholesale distribution. It was impossible to make the term all-inclusive in accordance with the principles discussed under Wholesale Distribution in its Broader Aspects, since the census was taken on an establishment basis. For this reason sales made by manufacturers and other producers from the plants in which production is carried on, were omitted from the statistics on wholesale distribution. Had such sales been included, it would have been necessary to require a separate distribution report from every producing establishment and from every farmer and nurseryman in addition to the report covering production activities.

Nor has it been found practicable to confine the term "wholesale distribution" to service wholesalers or to any other limited types of wholesalers, since a clear-cut functional division as between different types of wholesale organizations is practically nonexistent. Bulk tank stations in the petroleum trade operate very much like wholesalers of the conventional service type. The same is true, to a considerable degree, of wholesale sales branches maintained by manufacturers, and of numerous other types of wholesale establishments. On the other hand, service wholesalers of the conventional type frequently sell to industrial consumers and, in addition, vary their functions with different customers. Thus, some of their goods are sold on credit, some are sold on a drop shipment basis, and some on a cash-and-carry basis.

Volume of wholesale distribution.—The census of distribution includes all establishments which were engaged in 1929 in the purchase, sale, or distribution of goods on a wholesale basis, provided that such establishments specialized in distribution rather than in production or service. In this sense, during the year 1929, there were in operation 169,702 such establishments throughout the United States doing a volume of business amounting to $69,291,547,604. Of this amount sales to consumers at retail totaled $689,817,082 which must be subtracted from the amount stated above. To this must then be added the sales made by retailers to other retailers on a wholesale basis, or $706,776,962, so that the total volume of wholesale trade passing through establishments of all types, operating in all kinds of business, amounted to $69,308,507,484.

MOVEMENT OF GOODS INTO WHOLESALE CHANNELS

Movement of manufactured products.—Chart III and Table II show the extent to which manufactured goods flow into strictly wholesale channels, i. e., the volume of such products that is handled by wholesale organizations. The first step in the distribution process taken when the goods leave the producing plant has been reported for all but $4,024,086,000 by the manufacturers themselves, (see Table II) but the necessary computations have been made to make possible the use of the total volume of goods produced by manufacturers for distribution as a basis for calculating percentages. This latter amount has been broken down by estimates based on available data in the Bureau. Of the $63,409,200,000 selling value (f. o. b. factory) of goods produced by the manufacturing plants in the United States for distribution, 29.6 per cent went directly from the plants to wholesalers, 16.1 per cent went to manufacturers' own wholesale branches, 18.6 per cent was sold to outside retailers (including sales to chain stores), while 1.9 per cent was disposed of.

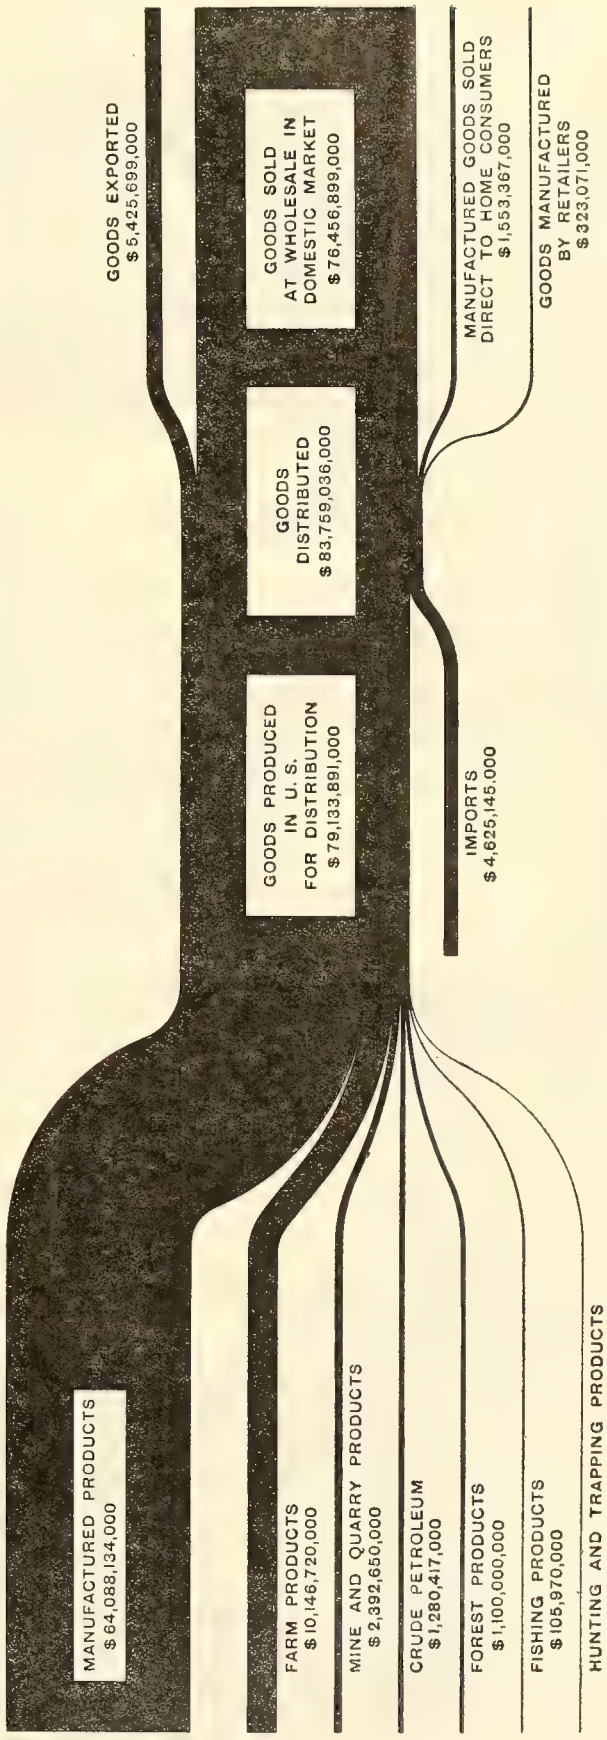

CHART II.—SOURCES AND VALUE OF GOODS DISTRIBUTED IN 1929

through retail stores maintained by the manufacturers, 31.3 per cent was sold direct to industrial consumers, and 2.5 per cent followed the most direct channel from producer to home consumer. Of the amount sold direct to home consumers, $382,894,000 represented sales of manufactured gas. Approximately 9 per cent of the total volume of manufactured goods entering trade was made through agents, such as manufacturers' agents, selling agents, brokers, and commission houses. All of this is naturally included in the total volume of wholesale distribution. This necessarily involves a certain amount of duplication, since a number of items are counted twice, but represents no duplication in the volume of business, as pointed out in a preceding paragraph.

Sales made direct to branches, wholesalers, retailers, and consumers	54,257,034,000	91.4

As indicated in Table II, the amount reported by manufacturers on a distribution basis consisted of $59,385,114,000. The products of service industries as well as contract and repair work and interplant transfers, do not enter trade. For this reason no distribution of sales data could be compiled for such values. There were, however, some plants and certain industries for which distribution of sales data were not available because the same could not be reported by the manufacturing establishments concerned, largely because of inadequate accounting records or because no such information was requested. The amount of manufactured goods for which no reports on the distribution of sales were available, but which entered trade, amounted to $4,024,086,000 which, when added to the $59,385,114,000 goods reported by channels, resulted in the figure $63,409,200,000, which is used as a basis for the computations of estimated selling value going through different channels of distribution. In making these computations, every industry was analyzed separately to insure satisfactory results.

While no reports were made by the manufacturers as to subsequent steps in the distribution process taken by their goods beyond the first step, it is possible through the statistics available in the Census of Wholesale Distribution to complete the picture, as shown on Chart III, and to indicate the approximate flow of such goods until they reach the points of consumption. The ultimate destination of manufactured goods consists of two distinct markets—the industrial consumer market, and the home consumer market. The industrial consumer market absorbed approximately 44.8 per cent of the $63,409,200,000 of goods produced by manufacturers for sale. They reached the market in the following manner:

Manufacturers → industrial consumers	$19,849,875,000
Manufacturers → manufacturers' sales branches → industrial consumers	3,582,976,950
Manufacturers → wholesalers, → industrial consumers Manufacturers' sales branches	4,941,499,002
Total	28,374,350,952

The direct sales from manufacturer to industrial consumers are as shown in Table II. The Census of Wholesale Distribution statistics show that manufacturers' sales branches made 35 per cent of their net sales to industrial consumers; hence 35 per cent of $10,237,077,000 as in Table II, or $3,582,976,950. The Wholesale Census statistics also show that wholesalers only made 23.58 per cent of their sales of manufactured goods [9] to industrial consumers. Table II shows that manufacturers sold direct to wholesalers $18,759,293,000 of goods, to which must be added $2,197,021,683 which is the share of the $10,237,077,000 estimated to have been sold to wholesalers by manufacturers' sales branches. When 23.58 per cent is taken of this sum (23.58 per cent × $20,956,314,683) it results in $4,941,499,002, which is the amount sold by wholesalers to industrial and other large consumers.

Since the industrial market constituted 44.8 per cent of the total, it naturally follows that the home or ultimate consumer market absorbed 55.2 per cent. It is important to bear in mind that these calculations are based merely on the value of goods, at f. o. b. factory prices, produced by manufacturers for distribution. Raw materials from whatever source, as well as imported semimanufactured and finished products, are not included. It is further important that the 55.2 per cent of the $63,409,200,000 be not regarded [9] From the net sales for wholesalers only as shown in Table 2, p. 66, have been deducted the sales of goods other than manufactures, as well as the sales of automobiles, groceries, and similar lines which were reported on schedules that had no provision for data on sales to industrial consumers. Consequently, the 23.58 per cent figure is based only on manufactured goods for which the schedules provided an inquiry concerning sales to industrial consumers.

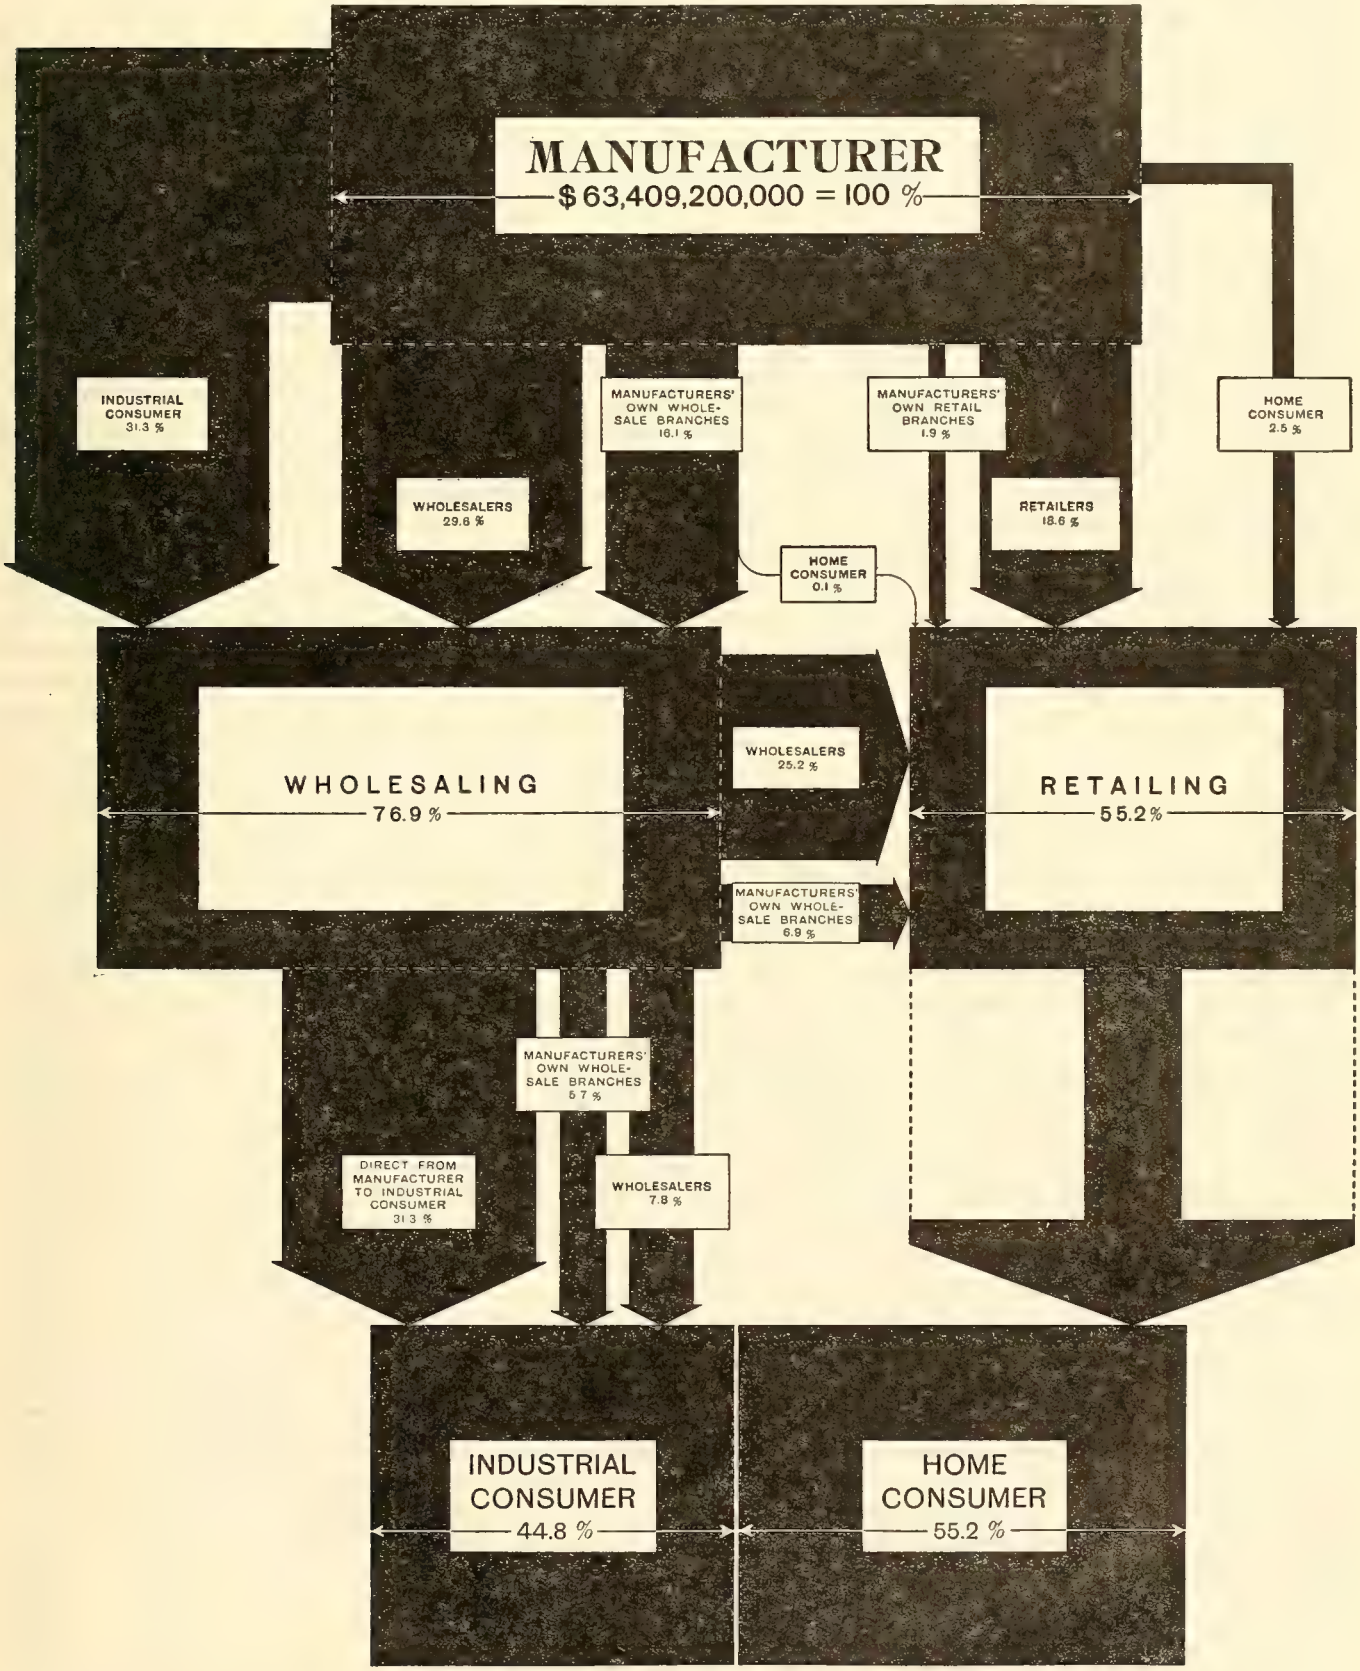
CHART III.—FLOW OF GOODS FROM MANUFACTURERS TO CONSUMERS



as goods passing through retail stores. Many kinds of commodities included in this figure, as illustrated by manufactured gas and by motion picture films, while intended for the home consumer market, are not sold through retail stores.

Variations in channels of distribution.—Not all manufactured products are distributed in like manner. Some goods are sold direct to home consumers, others require the use of a single middleman—the retailer—while still others are sold by manufacturers to wholesalers and sometimes through their own wholesale branches. The way in which a given product is distributed depends upon a number of factors, among which may be listed the nature of the commodity, its unit value, the size of the producing plant, the financial strength of the producer, the completeness of the line manufactured in a given plant, the nature of the market—whether the product is intended for the home consumer or the industrial consumer, and the existing marketing machinery which has developed for the distribution of a given product.

The variation in percentages of distribution through different types of wholesale and retail organizations is even greater for some industries than indicated for the food and grocery industries, depending largely upon the factors outlined in a preceding paragraph. The channels through which manufactured goods move are also affected by the location of the manufacturing plants in relation to the market for which the goods are intended. The more distant the manufacturer's producing plant is from its market the larger the variety of channels, other things being equal, and vice versa. The conditions underlying consumption constitute another factor in the determination of channels of distribution. Direct contact is usually necessitated when the goods require installation services and technical adaptation to the requirements of the customer. To approach the problem of selecting channels of distribution in a scientific way, it is essential that knowledge be obtained concerning how the various goods of the different industries are being distributed and what factors seem to have governed the percentage distribution of those goods by the various channels reported.

Flow of products of extractive industries.—Of the $15,025,757,000 of goods produced for distribution during the year 1929 by domestic industries other than manufacturers, shown in Table I, approximately 69.9 per cent ($10,510,456,000) was handled by wholesale establishments. This figure was based on the sales of products of extractive industries during the year reported to the Wholesale Census by commodities amounting to $11,250,893,000 and exclusive of duplicate sales made by agents, brokers, and other wholesale organizations which seem to sell to other wholesalers rather than to retailers or to industrial consumers. From this was deducted $740,437,000 in the form of the mark-up used by wholesale establishments since the $11,250,893,000 represents the selling value of these products by wholesale organizations, whereas the $15,025,757,000 represents the sales value at point of production. The amount of mark-up or margin was determined on the basis of operating cost as reported by wholesale establishments operating in the selected trades, to which was added an estimated net profit percentage.

The products from extractive industries flowing into wholesale channels were divided as follows:

SOURCE OF PRODUCTION	Value of production	Per cent sold through wholesale channels
Farm products	$10,146,720,000	90.0
Products of mines and quarries	2,392,670,000	38.1
Products of forests	1,100,000,000	29.2
Products of fisheries	105,970,000	(1)

[1] Includes an indeterminate value of processed fish and sea foods.

FUNCTIONS OF WHOLESALE ORGANIZATIONS

Practically all marketing organizations have come into existence as a result of a definite need for their services. It is probable that some of them have outlived their usefulness. For the most part, however, valid reasons may be found for the existence of the different types of organizations. This general statement applies to all types of wholesale organizations whose combined services are:

1. To distribute the goods of producers.
2. To establish business connections with retailers, industrial consumers, and other wholesale organizations to which the goods may be passed on in their movement to final destination. This may involve personal solicitation, advertising, or communication by correspondence, telephone, or telegraph.
3. To provide adequate facilities for concentrating and handling goods in large quantities when such goods are produced on a relatively small scale.
4. To assemble a large variety of merchandise from multifarious sources so as to facilitate buying under one roof on the part of retailers and industrial consumers.
5. To store goods until needed by the trade. Because of the seasonal nature of production in agriculture on the one hand, and the seasonal character of demand for many manufactured goods on the other, it is essential that reservoirs be provided at strategic points throughout the Nation to carry the physical inventories which these essential reserves represent. The wholesaler has performed this function traditionally and still continues to do so, although frequently assisted, in modern times, by public warehouses, manufacturers' warehouses, chain-store warehouses, and places provided by other types of integrated trading institutions, such as department stores and mail-order houses. Whoever performs this task, the necessity for providing storage for surplus reserves of merchandise in relatively close proximity to consuming centers, is an inescapable wholesale function.
6. To provide facilities for sorting, grading, and otherwise preparing the goods for the market, in compliance with the requirements of the trade.
7. To study the needs of the trade, quantitatively and qualitatively, in order to make proper goods available in suitable lots for prompt delivery.
8. To furnish financial assistance to sources of supply and to provide credit accommodations to customers.
9. To study market conditions and to gather and interpret all data affecting the movement of merchandise and the prices of the various commodities involved.
10. To render advice and assistance to customers in order to facilitate the flow of goods to final destination. This often necessitates the use of much dealer help with the aim of elevating retail merchandising to a higher plane of efficiency.

Variation in the performance of wholesale functions.—The functions outlined above vary considerably with the kind of business, plane of operation of the wholesale establishment, customers served, sources of supply represented, and the type of wholesale organization. Vegetables, for example, may be graded and sorted by the wholesale merchant or commission merchant, while manufactured goods coming into the hands of wholesalers do not require the performance of this function to the same extent since such goods have already been largely standardized by the manufacturer himself. Some wholesale establishments sell to other wholesale organizations instead of passing the goods on to retailers or to industrial consumers. To the extent to which this is true, it is unnecessary to render services which are normally required by retailers, such as dealer helps or even financial assistance in the form of credit accommodations. Furthermore, if sales are made by wholesalers to large-scale retail establishments, such retailers may perform some of the functions that are normally rendered by wholesalers. Again, the type of wholesale organization has a direct bearing upon the number and variety of functions rendered. Some wholesale organizations such as brokers or manufacturers' agents do not take title to the goods, therefore assume no risks and may have a limited amount of handling or no physical handling whatever.

The performance of a given function by wholesalers may also vary in degree, depending upon some of the same factors. Some manufacturers, for example, may do their own financing entirely and also create a demand for their goods. Others need financial assistance and require that the wholesaler furnish such help and also bear the burden of creating a demand for their products. In the majority of cases, the function of creating a demand for a manufacturer's goods is divided between the manufacturer and the wholesaler, but the degree to which the wholesaler is required to advertise and "sell" a given manufacturer's product varies considerably.

Changing character of wholesaling.—A brief survey of the history of development in the wholesale field inevitably leads to the conclusion that wholesaling is in a state of flux. Many types of wholesale organizations are now in existence which were unknown two decades ago. Cash-and-carry wholesalers and wagon distributors are of recent origin. Even the old conventional type wholesaler has modified his methods of operation to a considerable degree. It is likely that these changes will continue, depending largely upon changes in retailing. As retail institutions modify their methods of operation wholesale organizations serving them must do likewise. The development of the chain store, for example, necessitated a new form of wholesaling to enable independent stores to compete effectively with their chain rivals. This accounts largely for the existence of cooperative wholesalers and wholesale cash-and-carry establishments.

The growth of the department store with its large buying power was responsible to no small degree for the disintegration of some of the large national and sectional dry goods wholesalers handling a general line of dry goods, and the growth of specialty dry goods houses in various parts of the United States. It is probable that the tendency at the present time on the part of retailers to take on wider lines of merchandise will lend impetus to the growth of general line wholesalers so that the pendulum may swing back from specialty wholesaling to general line or general merchandise wholesaling.

The future structure of the wholesale field is also affected by policies and methods adopted by producers on the one hand and retailers or industrial consumers on the other. Hand-to-mouth buying, for example, on the part of either retailers or industrial consumers tends to strengthen the position of the wholesaler who is forced thereby to maintain more adequate stocks and to provide immediate delivery since many of the orders received by him are for rush shipment. The extent to which channels of distribution are selected by producers on the basis of facts and figures, rather than bias and preconceived notions, is another important factor. Above all, however, the future of wholesale organizations will depend largely on the extent to which the wholesale functions can be performed more economically by either retailers, industrial consumers, or selling producers which, in turn, is contingent to no small degree upon the alertness and efficiency on the part of existing wholesale establishments.

While no definite predictions can be made as to what the trends will be until other censuses are taken, the results of which might be compared with those of the present census, it is certain that changes will be effected in the wholesale field, although it is important to bear in mind that "nature makes no leaps" as evidenced by the continued importance of the old line service wholesaler.

GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION OF WHOLESALE TRADE

Wholesale trade, by divisions and by States.—In addition to presenting wholesale trade statistics by States, data are given for 9 groups of States known officially as geographic divisions.[10] It is believed that the States within each of the geographic divisions are sufficiently homogeneous in physical characteristics, in the composition of their population, or in their social and economic qualities to make each division a relatively distinct economic unit. Each geographic division differs, to a considerable degree, from most of the others so that comparisons can be made between different sections of the country, and since wholesale trade is seldom confined within State boundaries, geographic divisions are of considerable importance in measuring the market potentialities for various parts of the United States.

The wholesale trade of the United States appears to be highly concentrated geographically. The States in the Middle Atlantic, East North Central, and West North Central Divisions account for nearly two-thirds of the total volume (66.41 per cent), whereas these States contain but 52.8 per cent of total population. This is further corroborated by the statistics on Chart IV and in Table III showing wholesale trade by States. Fully 71.61 per cent of all wholesale trade is accounted for by the following 10 States, the first 4 of which were responsible for almost half (48.2 per cent) of the total volume:

STATE	Total sales	Per cent of total
New York	$17,604,633,829	25 41
Illinois	6,861,067,302	9 90
Pennsylvania	4,777,291,874	6 89
California	4,159,323,157	6 00
Missouri	3,361,720,921	4 85
Ohio	3,094,100,457	4 47
Massachusetts	3,065,855,586	4 42
Texas	2,804,517,879	4 05
Michigan	2,172,408,545	3 14
Minnesota	1,716,943,724	2.48

While there is some general relationship between the population of a State and its volume of wholesale trade, it is not as close as that indicated for the geographic divisions because the operations of many wholesale establishments cover wide territories, considerably beyond the boundaries of the State in which they are located. Colorado, for example, is thirty-third in population, but twenty-sixth in volume of wholesale trade. Nebraska is thirty-second in population but fourteenth in wholesale trade. The State of Washington is thirtieth in population but eleventh in wholesale trade. On the other hand, there are a number of States which are high in population but very low in wholesale distribution.

[10] The States included in the respective divisions are as follows:
New England—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut.
Middle Atlantic—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania.
East North Central—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin.
West North Central—Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas.
South Atlantic—Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.
East South Central—Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi.
West South Central—Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas.
Mountain—Colorado, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada
Pacific—California, Oregon, Washington.

Wholesale trade, by cities.—The concentration of wholesale trade in the larger cities is clearly brought out by the fact that fully 76.25 per cent of all wholesale business was transacted by establishments located in cities having, in 1930, 100,000 inhabitants or more. This business was conducted by 81,144 establishments or nearly half of the wholesale establishments in the United States. (These figures in no way reflect the amount of goods purchased at wholesale in any given area, nor do they show which wholesale establishments supply the consumption requirements of a given territory, except in a very general way.)

The facts in Table IV indicate not only the preponderance of large cities as wholesale markets but also that the average size of the business establishment is greater in these cities than in other communities, since less than half of all wholesale establishments account for over three-quarters of all the business. In partial explanation of this condition it may be pointed out that, in small communities, there are a large number of assemblers of agricultural commodities and many bulk tank stations in the petroleum trade which operate on a relatively small scale and thereby bring down the average.

Although the larger cities as a group dominate the wholesale trading picture, there is by no means perfect correlation between volume of wholesale trade and population within the city. The first two cities in population, New York and Chicago, are also the leading wholesale centers, but thereafter notable differences develop. Boston, for example, is the third largest wholesale center although only ninth in population. Again, San Francisco, which ranks eleventh in population, is fifth in wholesale trade; Pittsburgh, which is tenth in population, is seventh in wholesale trade; and Kansas City, Mo., which is nineteenth in population, is ninth in wholesale trade. There are, conversely, a number of cities which have a lower rank in wholesale trade than they enjoy in population. All in all, there is considerable variation between rank in volume of wholesale trade and rank in population for the entire group of cities, although the average variation is not great.[11]

Individual differences among cities, however, indicate that wholesale trade is a function of more than the single variable population. Other factors of importance are age of the community, the character of its hinterland, competition from other wholesale centers, special industrial developments, transportation facilities, proximity to the sea, and other geographic factors.

[11] A correlation coefficient of 0.84 was computed by the rank data method indicating a considerable degree of positive correlation between size of city and volume of wholesale trade. (A correlation coefficient may range from 0 to +1 or −1. The nearer it approaches +1 or −1 the greater the degree of correlation indicated.)

Wholesale trade by counties.—The concentration of wholesale trade by counties is shown in the following table (Table V) and on the accompanying map. Of the total volume of wholesale trade, over one-half, or $35,605,811,325, is accounted for by the following 11 counties (including the independent city of St. Louis) each with over $1,000,000,000 of wholesale trade:

State	County
California	Los Angeles
	San Francisco
Illinois	Cook
Massachusetts	Suffolk
Michigan	Wayne
Missouri	Jackson
	St. Louis City
New York	New York
Ohio	Cuyahoga
Pennsylvania	Allegheny
	Philadelphia

Another $8,476,641,567, or 12 per cent of the total volume, is accounted for by 13 additional counties showing business of $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 each. There are 52 counties each with a volume of business ranging from $100,000,000 to $500,000,000, which accounted for an additional $10,084,690,374, or 15 per cent. The next 51 counties, each with business ranging from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, contributed $3,477,341,736, or 5 per cent. Altogether, 127 counties and independent cities in the United States, each with business of $50,000,000 and over, contributed $57,644,485,002, or 83 per cent of the total volume of wholesale trade for the United States.

CHAPTER II—CLASSIFICATIONS AND DEFINITIONS

Need for classifications and definitions.—The Census of Distribution would fall far short of its possible usefulness were it to present data on distribution without breaking down the totals into carefully classified categories.

One aim of this census is to present data on the distribution of commodities. A second aim is to present a statistical picture of the marketing mechanism of the Nation and its various subdivisions, showing the marketing facilities which exist in each portion of the country and their relative importance as measured by volume of trade. A third aim is to supply data bearing on the relative efficiency of the different phases of our distribution system. Classifications of dealers and their operations are the bases for these latter and perhaps more important phases of the Census of Distribution.

The basic classifications are geographical in character and embrace the areas of States, counties, and incorporated cities and towns as fixed by the laws establishing their boundaries.

The classification of the business establishments, kinds of trade, and channels through which trade moves is also of very great importance as a basis for presenting statistical facts relative to distribution. Owing to the complexity of the situation, the partial absence of uniformity in business customs and the lack of adequate definitions in accepted use, these bases of classification have presented many problems. However, such classifications were necessary and have been made, arbitrarily when this was unavoidable, to fit the needs of this census and with a view to the needs of future censuses. An attempt has been made to follow accepted usage as closely as possible. On the other hand, it has been necessary to apply the same terminology consistently throughout the wholesale field even though there are some differences in the customary use of terms as between different trades.

The primary division of merchants into large classes, such as those in the retail field as opposed to those in the wholesale field, presents more complexities than might be expected. There is no simple division between retailers who sell to ultimate consumers on the one hand and wholesalers who sell to retailers on the other. There are many dealers who sell to manufacturers, mine operators, and building contractors rather than to the general public or to retailers. There are, also, many who sell partially to the general public and partially to retailers, to other wholesale dealers, and to industrial purchasers. In the retail division have been classified all the establishments which sell to the home consumer, including all establishments selling goods in a retail manner. Thus, restaurants have been included in the retail census, also stores selling feed and other supplies to farmers and stores selling hardware to the general public as well as to builders. In the wholesale field, on the other hand, are included those establishments which sell to retailers, to other wholesalers, and to industrial consumers.

The term wholesaler is ordinarily applied to a wholesale merchant who sells to retailers. This term is frequently expanded to include the larger wholesale houses which sell to smaller wholesalers. The term jobber is often used as a substitute for the term wholesaler, sometimes referring to those merchants who sell to retailers and sometimes to those who sell to other wholesalers. The term wholesale merchant is used here in the narrower and more conventional sense.

There is to-day a large miscellany of merchant concerns doing business in a wholesale manner, which do not fall within the ordinary conception of the term wholesaler and which are not classed as wholesale merchants in the census. They have, however, been classed in the wholesale field, because they perform wholesale functions. Thus, for census purposes, the wholesale field embraces almost all merchandising concerns except retail establishments, including assemblers of agricultural products.

Division between wholesale and retail distribution.—There are many business concerns which do not fall clearly in either the retail or the wholesale division. Since it has been impossible, as a rule, to classify any single business in more than one place, it has been necessary arbitrarily to classify each concern in accordance with its major activity. Consequently, concerns engaged in both retailing and wholesaling are classed as retailers or wholesalers in accordance with the bulk of their business. Concerns doing over 50 per cent of their business at retail have been counted as retailers, and those transacting more than 50 per cent of their business at wholesale have been counted as wholesale establishments. At the same time provision has been made to compile the retail sales of such wholesale establishments and the wholesale sales of such retailers, both of which may be termed semijobbers. Borderline cases between the retail and wholesale methods of doing business occur chiefly in what may be loosely designated as the supply and equipment field, or what some call the field of producers' goods.

This problem of classification is even more complicated in the building materials trade. Here, of course, all dealers selling more than half of their output to other dealers are classed in the wholesale field. On the other hand, all hardware and lumber dealers operating in a retail manner, whose business is open to purchasing on the part of the general public even though many of their sales are made to building contractors, are classed as retailers. Concerns whose schedules show their dealings to consist in one commodity line to the extent of 50 per cent or more have been classed in the wholesale field. (Commodity lines recognized for this purpose are: a, Brick, terra cotta, tile, etc.; b, building stone; c, cement, lime, plaster, etc.; d, structural steel, iron, and other metal building materials; e, building paper, wood-base insulating board, etc.; f, wall board other than wood-base; g, sand and gravel; and h, metal lath.)

Classification by kind of business.—In addition to distinguishing between those dealers in the retail and wholesale fields and others engaged in the field of distribution, all wholesale concerns have been classified by kind of business and type of establishment, as shown in the following pages. In order to make these classifications useful to the public it is, of course, necessary to present the definitions on which they are based. Consequently, this chapter presents in detail the classifications and definitions used by the wholesale division of the Census of Distribution.

After a careful examination of the schedules, all wholesale establishments in the United States have been divided into 24 groups. These groups comprise 88 major classifications and 343 minor or detailed classifications. Each establishment has been classified on the basis of the principal line or lines of merchandise handled. But the kind of business classifications, while on a commodity basis, must not be confused with the total volume of business in any one commodity, since many establishments handle more than a single commodity.

Three distinct bases were considered for the purpose of this classification:

1. The way in which certain goods are distributed, namely, the channels of distribution;
2. The source of supply of the commodity or commodities under consideration such as farm products, minerals, etc.; and
3. The utilization of the commodity by those who purchase it from the reporting firm.

To illustrate, soap powder used for household consumption is included among groceries, since the great bulk of such merchandise is handled through grocery channels. This classification obviously follows the first basis mentioned, namely, channels of distribution. Hides and skins, on the other hand, are classified under "Farm products (not elsewhere specified)," on the basis of their source of supply. Similarly, saddlery and harness are classified under "Leather and leather goods" because of the material from which saddlery and harness are primarily made. Fruits and vegetables are classified under "Food products (not elsewhere specified)" because of the way in which they are utilized, namely, for food purposes. Again, shoes take a wearing apparel classification because of the use to which they are put.

In some cases it was necessary to combine two or all three of the bases mentioned. For example, stoves and ranges are classified under "Plumbing and heating equipment and supplies," partly because they are distributed through plumbing channels, but largely because they are used for heating purposes, so that both the channels of distribution and the utilization of the products are being followed in this case.

It is important to bear in mind that the 24 groups of kinds of business are all-inclusive and that the 88 major kind of business classifications are also all-inclusive and represent either subdivisions of the respective 24 groups or consist of some of the groups themselves when subdivisions have not been made. The 343 detailed classifications are all-inclusive and cover all types of wholesale establishments by kind of business. This makes it possible to condense the detailed classifications into the major classifications and still further into the 24 groups in order to facilitate comparisons as between various geographic areas where complete detail can not be shown.

This matter of classification can best be explained by illustrations. Group I, for example, consists of amusement and sporting goods, which is divided into: (1) "Amusement and sporting goods (except cameras and motion-picture equipment and supplies)" and (2) "Cameras and motion-picture equipment and supplies." Major classification (1) is, in turn, divided into detailed classifications a–g, inclusive. If an establishment handled both amusement and sporting goods, each in substantial quantities, it was classified under (1–a), "Amusement and sporting goods (general line)." If amusement equipment constituted the greater bulk of its volume, the establishment was classified under (1–b), "Amusement equipment and supplies." If, however, sporting goods of a general nature constituted the major business of the establishment, it was placed under the classification (1–e), "Sporting goods (general line)."

Group IV, "Dry goods and apparel," further illustrates the method used in classifying establishments by kind of business based on the principal commodity or commodities handled. This group is divided into major classification number (12), "Clothing and furnishings (other than millinery and footwear)"; (13), "Dry goods (general line)"; (14), "Dry goods (specialty, other than specified)"; (15), "Millinery and millinery supplies"; (16), "Notions"; (17), "Piece goods"; and (18), "Shoes and other footwear." Establishments handling "Clothing and furnishings (other than millinery and footwear)" are further subdivided into detailed classifications, to wit: (12–a), "Clothing" (establishments handling a general line of clothing but no furnishings); (12–b), "Clothing and furnishings" (establishments handling a general line of clothing and a general line of furnishings); (12–c), "Clothing, men's and boys' " (establishments engaged in the sale of men's and boys' clothing exclusively or predominantly); (12–d), "Clothing, women's and children's" (establishments handling women's and children's clothing exclusively or predominantly); (12–e), "Clothing, secondhand" (establishments engaged in the handling of secondhand clothing); (12–f), "Furnishings" (establishments engaged in the handling of a general line of furnishings); (12–g), "Furnishings, men's and boys' " (establishments engaged in the handling of men's and boys' furnishings exclusively or predominantly); etc. All of the 12 minor classifications (12–a to 12–l, inclusive) total in value the amount of major classification (12) "Clothing and furnishings (other than millinery and footwear)," while the amounts opposite the seven major classifications appearing in the "Dry goods and apparel" group amount to the total value of that group.

WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS CLASSIFIED BY KIND OF BUSINESS

(Based on the principal lines of merchandise handled)

I. Amusement and Sporting Goods:
- 1. Amusement and sporting goods (except cameras and motion-picture equipment and supplies)—
  - a. Amusement and sporting goods (general line).
  - b. Amusement equipment and supplies (such as slot machines, games, gymnasium equipment, and playground equipment).
  - c. Bicycles and supplies.
  - d. Billiards, bowling equipment, and supplies.
  - e. Sporting goods (general line).
  - f. Toys, novelties, and fireworks.
  - g. Other amusement and sporting goods (special lines not provided for above).
- 2. Cameras and motion-picture equipment and supplies—
  - a. Cameras and photographic supplies.
  - b. Moving-picture apparatus.
  - c. Moving-picture films.
  - d. Talking-picture apparatus.

II. Automotive:
- 3. Automobiles and other motor vehicles—
  - a. Automobiles and other motor vehicles (general line).
  - b. Automobiles (new and used).
  - c. Automobiles (used).
  - d. Trucks and tractors.
- 4. Automotive equipment—
  - a. Automobile accessories.
  - b. Automotive equipment (general line).
  - c. Automotive equipment (specialty lines).
- 5. Automobile parts (new and used)—
  - a. Automobile parts (new) (such as pistons, pumps, gears, shafts, axles, springs, etc.).
  - b. Automobile parts (used).
- 6. Tires and tubes.

III. Chemicals, Drugs, and Allied Products:
- 7. Chemicals—
  - a. Chemicals, industrial (such as wood alcohol, bulk cleaning powders, and crude acids).
  - b. Dyestuffs.
  - c. Dyes, dry-cleaning supplies, and allied products.
  - d. Explosives.
  - e. Insecticides.
  - f. Naval stores.
  - g. Other chemicals (including grain alcohol, refined chemicals, and coal-tar products).
- 8. Drugs and drug sundries (general line).
- 9. Drugs and drug sundries (specialty).
  - a. Drugs.
  - b. Drug sundries.
  - c. Patent medicines.
  - d. Rubber goods (druggists').
  - e. Sanitary supplies, insecticides, etc.
  - f. Whiskey.
  - g. Other alcoholic beverages.
- 10. Paints, varnishes, lacquers, and enamels.
- 11. Toilet articles and preparations—
  - a. Toilet articles.
  - b. Toilet preparations.

IV. Dry Goods and Apparel:
- 12. Clothing and furnishings (other than millinery and footwear)—
  - a. Clothing (general line) (does not include furnishings).
  - b. Clothing and furnishings.
  - c. Clothing, men's and boys'.
  - d. Clothing, women's and children's.
  - e. Clothing (secondhand).
  - f. Furnishings (general line) (such as shirts, ties, lingerie, hosiery, hats, caps, etc.)
  - g. Furnishings, men's and boys'.

IV. Dry Goods and Apparel—Continued.

12. Clothing and furnishings—Continued.
    - h. Furnishings, women's and children's.
    - i. Furs and fur clothing.
    - j. Hats and caps.
    - k. Hosiery.
    - l. Other clothing and furnishings (such as specialty houses for ties, shirts, and sport wear).
13. Dry goods (general line).
14. Dry goods (specialty, other than specified)—
    - a. Knit goods.
    - b. Other dry goods (specialty, such as blankets and other specialty lines not provided for).
15. Millinery and millinery supplies.
16. Notions—
    - a. Buttons.
    - b. Gloves.
    - c. Laces and embroideries.
    - d. Notions (general line).
    - e. Tailors' trimmings and supplies.
17. Piece goods—
    - a. Cotton goods.
    - b. Linens.
    - c. Piece goods (general line).
    - d. Rayons.
    - e. Silks and velvets.
    - f. Woolens and worsteds.
18. Shoes and other footwear.

V. Electrical:

19. Electrical goods (including appliances)—
    - a. Electrical merchandise (general line).
    - b. Electrical appliances (such as washing machines, toasters, stoves, percolators, and irons and ironers)
20. Electrical equipment and supplies—
    - a. Batteries.
    - b. Electrical equipment and supplies (general line).
    - c. Motors and generators.
21. Radios and radio equipment.
22. Refrigerators (electric).

VI. Farm Products (not elsewhere specified):

23. Cotton—
    - a. Cotton.
    - b. Cotton linters.
    - c. Cotton and cottonseed.
24. Flowers and nursery stock—
    - a. Florists (flowers).
    - b. Flowers and nursery stock.
    - c. Seeds, bulbs, and nursery stocks.
25. Grain—
    - a. Corn.
    - b. Oats.
    - c. Rice.
    - d. Wheat.
    - e. Grain (general line).
    - f. Other grain (such as rye and barley).
26. Hides, skins, and furs—
    - a. Furs (dressed).
    - b. Furs (raw).
    - c. Hides and skins.

VI. Farm Products—Continued.

27. Horses and mules—
    - a. Horses and mules.
    - b. Mules.
28. Livestock (except horses and mules)—
    - a. Calves.
    - b. Cattle.
    - c. Hogs.
    - d. Livestock (general line).
    - e. Sheep and lambs.
29. Silk (raw).
30. Tobacco (leaf).
31. Wool and mohair.
32. Other farm products—
    - a. Bristles and hair.
    - b. Cotton seed.
    - c. Cotton, cottonseed, and fertilizer.
    - d. Farm products (not elsewhere classified).
    - e. Feathers.

VII. Farm Supplies (except Machinery and Equipment):

33. Farm supplies (except feed and fertilizer)
    - a. Farm supplies (general line).
    - b. Seeds.
    - c. Straw.
34. Feed—
    - a. Feed (exclusively, mixed and other).
    - b. Feed and fertilizer.
    - c. Hay, grain, and feed.
35. Fertilizer and fertilizer materials.

VIII. Food Products (not elsewhere specified): (Groceries and food specialties are given in a separate classification. See XII.)

36. Confectionery and soft drinks—
    - a. Confectionery and soft drinks (general line).
    - b. Confectionery.
    - c. Soft drinks.
37. Dairy products—
    - a. Butter.
    - b. Butter and cheese.
    - c. Cheese.
    - d. Dairy products (general line).
    - e. Ice cream.
    - f. Milk and cream.
38. Poultry and poultry products—
    - a. Eggs.
    - b. Poultry.
    - c. Poultry and poultry products (general line).
39. Dairy and poultry products.
40. Fish and sea foods—
    - a. Fish and sea foods (fresh and cured).
    - b. Fish and sea foods (fresh).
    - c. Fish and sea foods (cured).
41. Fruits and vegetables (fresh)—
    - a. Fruits.
    - b. Fruits and vegetables (general line).
    - c. Produce (including vegetables, fruits, dairy products, fish, poultry, eggs, etc., with fruits and vegetables predominating).
    - d. Vegetables.

VIII. Food Products—Continued.
- 42. Meats and meat products—
  - a. Lard.
  - b. Meats (cured).
  - c. Meats (fresh).
  - d. Meats and meat products (general line).
  - e. Meats and provisions (including poultry, eggs, dairy products, lard, etc.).

IX. Forest Products (except Lumber):
- 43. Boxes, shooks, and cooperage—
  - a. Boxes and box shooks.
  - b. Cooperage (such as barrels, casks, and tubs).
- 44. Logs, railroad ties, piles, etc.—
  - a. Firewood.
  - b. Logs, piles, and posts.
  - c. Railroad ties.
- 45. Other forest products (including woodenware, pulpwood, turning blocks, pine needles, etc.).

X. Furniture and House Furnishings:
- 46. Furniture—
  - a. Antique goods.
  - b. Furniture (general line).
  - c. Furniture (household).
  - d. Furniture (office).
  - e. Furniture (secondhand).
  - f. Other furniture (specialty lines).
- 47. House furnishings—
  - a. Art goods.
  - b. Brooms and brushes.
  - c. China, glassware, and crockery.
  - d. Curtains and draperies.
  - e. Floor coverings.
  - f. House furnishings (general line).
  - g. Household supplies.
  - h. Lamps and lamp shades.
  - i. Pictures and picture frames.
- 48. Musical instruments and sheet music—
  - a. Musical instruments, accessories, and parts.
  - b. Pianos.
  - c. Phonographs and phonograph supplies.
  - d. Sheet music.

XI. 49. General Merchandise (Establishments Handling in Substantial Proportions Three or More Distinct and Unrelated Lines of Merchandise).

XII. Groceries and Food Specialties:
- 50. Groceries (general line).
- 51. Food and grocery specialties.
  - a. Bakery products.
  - b. Beans, dried.
  - c. Biscuits and crackers.
  - d. Canned fruits and vegetables.
  - e. Canned goods (general line).
  - f. Canned sea food.
  - g. Cereals.
  - h. Coffee.
  - i. Coffee, tea, and spices.
  - j. Delicatessen products.
  - k. Extracts and spices.
  - l. Flour.

XII. Groceries and Food—Continued.
- 51. Food and grocery specialties—Continued.
  - m. Flour and feed.
  - n. Fruits and vegetables (dried).
  - o. Lard substitutes.
  - p. Soaps and soap powders.
  - q. Sugar.
  - r. Other food and grocery specialties (such as salad dressings, pickles, jams, and jellies).

XIII. Hardware:
- 52. Hardware (general line).
- 53. Hardware (specialty)—
  - a. Builders' hardware.
  - b. Heavy hardware.
  - c. Shelf hardware.
  - d. Tools and cutlery.
  - e. Other hardware (specialty lines such as door hardware, ornamental fencing, sign plates, and marine hardware).

XIV. Iron and Steel Scrap and Other Waste Materials:
- 54. Iron and steel scrap.
- 55. Junk and scrap (includes dealers handling a general line of waste materials).
- 56. Waste rubber, rags, and paper—
  - a. Paper (waste).
  - b. Rags.
  - c. Rubber (scrap).

XV. Jewelry and Optical Goods:
- 57. Jewelry—
  - a. Clocks and watches.
  - b. Diamonds and other precious stones.
  - c. Jewelry (general line).
  - d. Silverware.
  - e. Other jewelry (such as semiprecious stones, mountings, ornaments, and novelty jewelry).
- 58. Optical goods.

XVI. Leather and Leather Goods (except Gloves and Shoes):
- 59. Leather and leather goods (general line).
- 60. Leather and leather belting—
  - a. Belting (leather).
  - b. Leather.
- 61. Luggage and leather goods—
  - a. Leather goods (not elsewhere classified).
  - b. Luggage.
- 62. Saddlery and harness.
- 63. Shoe findings and cut stock—
  - a. Cut stock (leather).
  - b. Shoe findings.

XVII. Lumber and Building Materials (other than Metal):
- 64. Construction and building materials (other than metal and wood)—
  - a. Asbestos products.
  - b. Brick and tile.
  - c. Building stone.
  - d. Cement.
  - e. Glass.

XVII. Lumber and Building Materials—Contd.

64. Construction and building materials—Continued.
   - f. Granite and marble.
   - g. Lime, plaster, etc.
   - h. Roofing materials (nonmetallic).
   - i. Sand, gravel, and crushed stone.
   - j. Other building materials (such as insulating and wallboard materials, cork slabs, and art stone).

65. Lumber and millwork—
   - a. Lumber.
   - b. Lumber and millwork.
   - c. Millwork.

XVIII. Machinery, Equipment, and Supplies (except Electrical):

66. Commercial equipment and supplies—
   - a. Automatic vending machinery.
   - b. Butchers' equipment and supplies.
   - c. Filling station equipment and supplies.
   - d. Florists' supplies.
   - e. Hotel and restaurant equipment and supplies.
   - f. Office equipment and supplies (other than furniture).
   - g. Soda fountain equipment and supplies.
   - h. Store equipment and supplies (general line).
   - i. Other commercial equipment and supplies.

67. Construction equipment and supplies—
   - a. Builders' supplies.
   - b. Construction equipment (such as derricks, scaffolding, and elevators).
   - c. Construction machinery (such as concrete mixers, sanding and polishing machines, excavating shovels, and graders).
   - d. Construction machinery, equipment, and supplies (general line).
   - e. Road machinery and equipment.

68. Farm machinery and equipment—
   - a. Dairy equipment.
   - b. Farm implements (such as harrows, cultivators, and walking plows).
   - c. Farm machinery and equipment (such as harvesters, binders, hay hoists, stationary engines, pump jacks and pumps, gang plows, and corn listers).

69. Manufacturing, mining, and drilling machinery, equipment, and supplies—
   - a. Bakers' equipment and supplies.
   - b. Bottles and bottling equipment.
   - c. Canning machinery.
   - d. Chemical equipment and supplies.
   - e. Conveyor and hoisting machinery.

XVIII. Machinery, Equipment, and Supplies—Con.

69. Manufacturing, mining, and drilling machinery, equipment and supplies—Continued.
   - f. Drilling machinery.
   - g. Foundry equipment and supplies.
   - h. Jewelers' equipment and supplies.
   - i. Machine tools.
   - j. Mechanical rubber goods (such as belting, packing, hose, gaskets, and recoil pads).
   - k. Mill and mine supplies (general line).
   - l. Oil-well machinery, equipment, and supplies.
   - m. Power engines.
   - n. Power-house equipment (such as boilers, condensers, injectors' filters, and stokers).
   - o. Printers' and lithographers' supplies.
   - p. Pumps, pump parts, and supplies.
   - q. Shoe machinery.
   - r. Textile machinery and equipment.
   - s. Welding equipment.
   - t. Other industrial machinery, equipment, and supplies.

70. Professional equipment and supplies—
   - a. Art supplies.
   - b. Church equipment and supplies.
   - c. Dental supplies and equipment.
   - d. Pharmacists' supplies.
   - e. School equipment and supplies.
   - f. Scientific and laboratory equipment and supplies.
   - g. Surgical, medical, and hospital equipment and supplies.
   - h. Other professional equipment and supplies.

71. Service equipment and supplies—
   - a. Barber and beauty parlor equipment and supplies.
   - b. Bootblack and hat cleaners' equipment and supplies.
   - c. Dry cleaners' supplies and allied products.
   - d. Fire protection equipment.
   - e. Janitors' equipment and supplies.
   - f. Laundry equipment and supplies.
   - g. Plumbers' equipment and supplies.
   - h. Service equipment and supplies (general line).
   - i. Shoes repairers' equipment and supplies.
   - j. Undertakers' supplies.
   - k. Upholsterers' supplies.
   - l. Warehouse equipment and supplies.

72. Transportation equipment and supplies—
   - a. Aircraft and aeronautical equipment.
   - b. Railroad equipment and supplies.

XVIII. Machinery, Equipment, and Supplies—Con.
- 72. Transportation equipment and supplies—Continued.
  - c. Ship equipment and supplies.
  - d. Other transportation equipment and supplies (such as tramways, aerial hoists, motor boats (commercial), and compressed air tubes).

XIX. Metals and Minerals (except Petroleum and Scrap):
- 73. Coal—
  - a. Coal (general line).
  - b. Coal, anthracite.
  - c. Coal, bituminous.
  - d. Coal and coke.
  - e. Fuel (including briquets, peat, charcoal, and natural gas).
- 74. Iron and steel (except scrap)—
  - a. Castings (metal).
  - b. Iron and steel (except scrap).
  - c. Iron and steel products (not elsewhere classified).
- 75. Metals and metal work other than iron and steel—
  - a. Brass and brass products.
  - b. Copper.
  - c. Lead and zinc.
  - d. Sheet-metal products.
  - e. Tin.
  - f. Other metals and metal work (such as nickel, bronze, aluminum, and alloying materials).

XX. Paper and Paper Products:
- 76. Paper and paper products (general line).
- 77. Paper and paper products (specialty, other than specified)—
  - a. Paper.
  - b. Wrapping paper and paper bags.
  - c. Other paper products (such as novelties, papier-mâché, paper napkins, mulch papers, calendars, and art goods).
- 78. Stationery and stationery supplies.
- 79. Wall paper.

XXI. 80. Petroleum and Petroleum Products:
- a. Crude oil.
- b. Fuel oil.
- c. Gasoline and oil.
- d. Gasoline and naphthas.
- e. Lubricating oils and greases.
- f. Petroleum and petroleum products (general line).
- g. Other petroleum and petroleum products (such as kerosene, cleaning liquids, road preparations, bitumastic paints, and asphalts).

XXII. Plumbing and Heating Equipment and Supplies:
- 81. Plumbing equipment and supplies—
  - a. Pipe, valves, and fittings.
  - b. Plumbing and heating equipment and supplies (general line).
  - c. Plumbing and mill supplies.
  - d. Ventilating equipment and supplies.
  - e. Other plumbing and heating equipment and supplies.
- 82. Heating equipment and supplies—
  - a. Furnaces.
  - b. Heating equipment (general line).
  - c. Oil burners.
  - d. Stoves and ranges.

XXIII. 83. Tobacco and Tobacco Products (except Leaf):
- a. Cigars.
- b. Cigars, cigarettes, and tobacco.
- c. Tobacco.
- d. Tobacco products.

XXIV. All Other:
- 84. Books, periodicals, and newspapers—
  - a. Books and periodicals.
  - b. Newspapers and magazines.
- 85. Oils and greases (animal and vegetable)—
  - a. Animal oils (including grease and tallow).
  - b. Essential oils.
  - c. Vegetable oils (cottonseed, linseed, etc.).
- 86. Rubber goods (general line).
- 87. Textiles and textile materials (other than dry goods)—
  - a. Bags and bagging.
  - b. Burlap.
  - c. Cordage and twine.
  - d. Tents and awnings.
  - e. Textiles and textile materials, other than dry goods (general line).
  - f. Yarn.
  - g. Other textiles (exclusive of dry goods, not specified above).
- 88. Miscellaneous kinds of business—
  - a. Advertising goods (such as signs, calendars, booklets, cloth banners, celluloid and metal novelties).
  - b. Artificial flowers and plants.
  - c. Baskets.
  - d. Boats.
  - e. Flour, feed, and coal.
  - f. Ice.
  - g. Novelties.
  - h. Rubber (crude).
  - i. Smokers' supplies.
  - j. Miscellaneous kinds of business (other than specified).

CLASSIFICATION BY TYPE OF ESTABLISHMENT

Types of establishments.—In determining the types of wholesale establishments the approach is primarily on the functional basis. In the grocery business, for example, there are, in addition to what may be termed "service" wholesalers, a number of newer types of wholesale distributors, such as drop shippers or desk jobbers, wagon distributors, and cash-and-carry wholesalers. There is, further, in the grocery business a large number of brokers, chain-store warehouses, exporters, importers, selling agents, and several other types of distributors. It is not sufficient to present census statistics by kind of business only, inasmuch as the operating expenses, the methods of operation, and a number of other important factors vary as between different functional types of establishments operating in the same kind of business. The operating expenses of a coffee broker, for example, is much lower than the cost incurred by a coffee jobber or wholesaler, since the range of functions differs widely. There are in the wholesale field 44 different types of establishments, defined and classified below.

Bases for grouping types of wholesale establishments.—In any attempt to classify or group types of wholesale establishments several possibilities are encountered. Such establishments may be classified:

1. According to the ownership of goods, into those which take title to the merchandise and operate as merchants and those which do not take title.
2. According to the ownership of the establishments, in order to indicate single unit establishments, branches, and chains.
3. According to the relationship of the wholesale establishment to retail outlets, as in the case of chain store warehouses, or to producers, as in the case of manufacturers' sales branches.
4. According to services rendered, indicating whether they render complete or limited services.
5. On the basis of the domestic territory covered, according to which they may be divided into local, sectional, and national.
6. According to whether they are engaged in foreign or domestic trade.
7. On the basis of whether they emphasize the buying function or the selling function, namely, a division into buying establishments and selling establishments.

Any one of these classes may be further subdivided. Thus it is possible to classify organizations engaged in domestic trade into buying organizations and selling organizations. Each of these may in turn be classified on the basis of title to the goods in order to show merchant and nonmerchant establishments, as well as on the basis of who owns the establishments, in order to determine whether they are integrated with retail stores as in the case of chain-store warehouses or with manufacturing establishments as in the case of manufacturers' sales branches.

Census groups.—In order to present statistics in such a way as to enable anyone to work out whatever classification he deems most essential, the types of wholesale establishments have been divided into 10 groups or general classes, as shown below. With the exception of Groups I, VIII, and IX, these groupings are self-explanatory, and need no further elaboration except that reference must be made to the specific definitions presented in the following pages for the different types of establishments appearing under or in connection with each of the ten groups.

In Group I under wholesalers only are included all wholesale establishments engaged in the buying and selling of goods on their own account owned and controlled independently of manufacturers or retail chains. They actually take title to the goods. While most of the establishments in this group sell primarily to retailers, some of them handle goods which are sold chiefly to industrial consumers. On the other hand, this group does not include many others which operate in practically the same manner, as is true of many manufacturers' sales branches and bulk tank stations, because the one is tied up directly with manufacturing establishments while the other is tied up to a certain extent with retail outlets which they supply with merchandise.

Group VIII, headed "Agents and brokers," comprises all wholesale middlemen who are in business for themselves, but who act as representatives of clients either in the buying or selling of goods, or both. They do not take title to the merchandise involved in their negotiations.

Under Group IX, "Assemblers and country buyers," have been listed the types of establishments which are peculiar to the handling of agricultural commodities on a wholesale basis. There are included under this general heading eight subordinate classifications as indicated below. Each of these eight subordinate classifications does not necessarily represent a different functional type of establishment, but has to some extent been determined on a kind of business basis. For example, cream stations, milk stations, and line elevators are in many respects similar types of establishments functionally. Each of these three is engaged in the assembling of their respective kinds of farm products for the organization with which they may be connected. They are distinguished primarily on the basis of commodities handled rather than on the basis of functions.

I. Wholesalers only:
  (a) Service wholesalers—
    1. Wholesale merchants, including jobbers and semijobbers.
    2. Converters.
    3. Exporters.
    4. Importers.
  (b) Limited-function wholesalers—
    1. Cash-and-carry wholesalers.
    2. Drop shippers.
    3. Mail-order wholesalers.
    4. Wagon distributors.
    5. Warehouses (distributing).
  (c) Supply and machinery distributors.

II. Bulk-tank stations.
III. Chain-store warehouses, including wholesale commissaries.
IV. District sales offices.
V. General sales offices.
VI. Manufacturers' sales branches.
VII. Cooperative sales agencies.
VIII. Agents and brokers:
  (a) Auction companies.
  (b) Brokers.
  (c) Commission merchants, including factors.
  (d) Export agents—
    1. Export commission houses.
    2. Export agents and brokers.
  (e) Import agents—
    1. Import commission merchants.
    2. Import manufacturers' agents.
    3. Import selling agents.
  (f) Manufacturers' agents.
  (g) Purchasing agents.
  (h) Resident buyers.
  (i) Selling agents.
IX. Assemblers and country buyers:
  (a) Assemblers.
  (b) Cooperative marketing associations.
  (c) Country buyers on salary or commission.
  (d) Cream stations.[1]
  (e) Elevators (independent).
  (f) Elevators (line).
  (g) Milk stations.[1]
  (h) Packers and shippers.
X. Wholesaling manufacturers.

DEFINITIONS OF TYPES OF WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS

I. Wholesalers only.—The term wholesalers only, for census purposes, includes service and limited-function wholesalers as well as exporters, importers, converters, and supply and machinery distributors, all of whom are engaged in the buying and selling of merchandise on their own account at wholesale. This term is not to be confused with wholesale merchants as defined below, although in some trades the two may be alike, since there may not be in such trades any exporters, importers or limited-function wholesalers. Wholesalers only are divided into three classes: Service wholesalers, limited-function wholesalers, and supply and machinery distributors.

(a) Service wholesalers, or full-function wholesalers, are of the conventional type and perform all of the principal wholesale functions. They buy and sell goods on their own account; carry stocks in their places of business; assemble in large scale lots and redistribute to retailers or other dealers, usually through salesmen who also keep the retailers posted on market developments. This group includes wholesale merchants, jobbers, semijobbers, and cooperative buying associations; exporters; importers; and converters.

1. Wholesale merchants, usually known as wholesalers, but used here in a more restricted sense, cover all full-function wholesalers performing their functions primarily in the domestic market. In some trades, particularly where the merchandise is of a perishable nature or derived from unstandardized production, wholesale merchants must, in addition to rendering the services enumerated in the preceding paragraph, perform the functions of grading and standardization. Although wholesale merchants sell primarily to retailers, a substantial amount of their sales are made to industrial consumers such as restaurants, hotels, public institutions, public utilities, manufacturers, mining companies, oil-well companies, and the like, and to other wholesalers. It is indeed quite difficult, for example, to find a large wholesaler of hardware who does not at the same time cater to industrial consumers.

Wholesale merchants and jobbers are used as synonymous terms in this classification, since it was impossible to distinguish between them on the basis of the reports submitted. The terms are used interchangeably to a growing extent in most, if not all, trades, and the functions performed by wholesale merchants and jobbers appear to differ only in degree. The semijobbers included in this classification are wholesale merchants who combine wholesaling and retailing in a single establishment with the major emphasis on wholesaling. Finally, cooperative buying associations, or establishments maintained by groups of retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers, or other groups for the purpose of buying or assembling merchandise for members and rendering other wholesale functions, have been combined with wholesale merchants because the reports furnished by such organizations, with few exceptions, could not be distinguished from reports of regular wholesalers.

2. Converters are wholesale middlemen found chiefly in the textile trade. In addition to most of the functions of wholesale merchants, converters perform or have performed for them some of the functions of textile manufacturing in its final stages, thereby assuming substantial risks incident to style changes. Converters purchase goods from the textile manufacturers for finishing, dyeing, printing, etc. Sales of the finished product are then made to cutters-up, wholesalers, or to large-scale retailers.

In some instances the style risk in connection with the handling of goods by converters is practically absent. There are converters, for example, who take the yardage from certain mills and send it to a bleachery where the merchandise is bleached, starched, yarded, and put in salable condition. Such goods are then distributed to the shoe manufacturing industry, the bookbinding industry, and to others.

Converters are included in the Census of Distribution for their merchandising functions. The plants engaged in bleaching, etc., are included in the Census of Manufactures.

3. Exporters are wholesale merchants selling in the foreign rather than in the domestic market. Their sales may be largely to the wholesale merchants abroad or to industrial consumers, rather than to retailers, as is the case with wholesale merchants engaged in domestic trade.

4. Importers in the wholesale field are to be largely identified with wholesale merchants as far as functions are concerned. The chief distinction lies in the source of purchases which, for importers, is in the foreign field. Furthermore, sales by importers may be made largely to wholesalers or to industrial consumers rather than direct to retailers.

(b) Limited-function wholesalers perform wholesaling operations in varying degrees as follows:

1. Cash-and-carry wholesalers buy and sell merchandise in their own name, carry stock in storage, usually assemble in large quantities, and sell in smaller amounts to retail and other dealers who call for the goods at their places of business and pay cash for them. They are to be distinguished from wholesale merchants by the fact that they usually carry a reduced line of products, mostly staples and fast-moving items, and do not extend credit to the retailer, nor do they make free deliveries. As a rule, they employ no outside salesmen, hence they reduce the wholesale merchant's emphasis upon the selling function and at the same time cut down upon the amount of market information which the full-function wholesaler makes available for his customers. Frequently, such establishments are operated as branches of "service" wholesalers in order to meet competition from chains, cooperatives, and other cash-and-carry sellers. For purposes of the Census of Distribution, only establishments that sell primarily on a cash-and-carry basis are regarded as cash-and-carry wholesalers.

[1] Complete data for these types are presented in a separate report.

2. Drop shippers or desk jobbers usually operate from offices. They do not perform the functions of warehousing or storage and transporting or delivery, since all orders solicited from retailers and others who buy on a wholesale basis are shipped directly from the manufacturers to such retailers and other customers. While they buy and sell in their own names, assume some risk and may extend credit, drop shippers are to be sharply distinguished from the full-function wholesalers who actually handle the goods. Special provision has been made to show in another connection the amount of business done on a drop shipment basis by so-called regular wholesalers. Under this classification are listed only those wholesale merchants that do all or the bulk of their business on a drop-shipment basis.

3. Mail-order or catalogue wholesalers sell all or the bulk of their goods by mail. Otherwise such establishments operate in every way as service wholesalers, extending credit, making deliveries, etc. Many of them employ "good will" traveling men who tend to become active in the solicitation of orders.

4. Wagon distributors or wagon jobbers perform the wholesale functions of buying, selling, warehousing or storage, and delivery or transportation. Occasionally they extend credit to their customers. Their chief distinction from ordinary wholesalers lies in the following points:

(1) They combine the functions of salesmen with those of deliverymen. In other words, no separate sales force is employed, the work of selling and delivery being carried out by salesmen-drivers.

(2) They normally carry a limited assortment of merchandise, consisting of nationally advertised specialties and fast moving items of a perishable nature.

(3) Normally they sell for cash and in original packages.

5. Warehouses (distributing), other than chain store warehouses, specialize in the performance of the storage function. In certain instances warehouse companies buy and sell on their own account. Whenever they add these functions to that of storage, they are included in the Census of Distribution. At such times they frequently take on additional functions such as the extension of credit and delivery. No warehouses are included in the Census of Distribution unless they buy or sell goods on their own account, regardless of whether they maintain display rooms and sell for clients incidentally to the performance of their storage function, since purely service organizations operating in the wholesale field are not included in the census.

(c) Supply and machinery distributors operate practically as wholesale merchants, performing most of the wholesale functions. As used in this census the term refers to wholesalers engaged in the distribution of construction machinery, equipment, and supplies; manufacturing, mining and drilling machinery, equipment, and supplies; and transportation equipment and supplies except "Aircraft and aeronautical equipment and supplies"; the sales being made primarily to industrial consumers. It does not include wholesalers distributing commercial equipment and supplies or service equipment and supplies. Many concerns handling mill and factory supplies have been classified as wholesale merchants because they handle chiefly hardware, plumbing and heating equipment, etc., with mill supplies as an adjunct to their main line of merchandise.

II. Bulk tank stations perform wholesale functions in the distribution of gasoline, oil, and other petroleum products. Out of these stations, tank wagons operated by salesmen-drivers cover the service or gasoline filling stations, both company-owned and independent. In the first instance bulk tank stations resemble chain store warehouses, while in the second case they act as ordinary wholesale merchants. Frequently, bulk stations do business on both bases. In fact, some of the largest oil companies sell most of their products through their bulk tank stations to independent retailers. They also supply in this manner independent wholesalers and large consumers. Most bulk stations are owned and operated by producing companies, although some of them are owned and operated by wholesale marketers of petroleum products who are not engaged in refining. The terms "bulk tank station," "bulk station," or "bulk plant" apply only to multiple-unit establishments actually handling the merchandise, thereby excluding brokers and other agents who do not handle the goods, as well as single-unit establishments engaged in the wholesaling of petroleum and petroleum products. All of these are classified in the usual manner.

III. Chain store warehouses are establishments maintained by retail chains as distributing stations used to supply their stores with merchandise. In some respects they are similar in operations to establishments of wholesale merchants and are, in reality, more than mere warehouses. They maintain stocks, break bulk, and deliver and bill the merchandise to the retail outlets. Furthermore, the activities of these warehouses may include accounting and general supervision, and chain systems often maintain branch executive offices at these warehouses charged with the superintendence of the retail outlets within their respective districts. Wholesale commissaries are included under this heading because they are essentially centralized warehousing establishments supplying company stores of manufacturing, mining, or other producing concerns which cater to employees of such industries. They are also operated in connection with bakeries and prepared-food depots which maintain their own restaurants.

IV. District sales offices are manufacturers' establishments engaged in the supervision of wholesale branches or of independent distributors operating in certain districts. While their chief function is that of a supervising sales office, they may also handle the sales in the immediate vicinity or sell to a selected group of customers throughout the entire district. Such offices may in some cases provide warehouses for the storage of goods to expedite delivery. In such cases all of the wholesale functions are performed and the district sales office resembles to that extent a manufacturer's sales branch. The volume of sales by all subsidiary establishments in the district was reported by the district sales office usually in addition to, and consolidated with, the sales made by the office itself.

V. General sales offices are separate wholesale sales departments of manufacturers, whose function it is to supervise the sales of district offices and of manufacturers' sales branches. In addition, general sales offices frequently handle institutional business consisting of sales to very large purchasers, institutions, or departments of government. Export sales are also normally handled through these offices. Most of the oil refineries, for example, make sales to foreign countries, tanker or cargo sales, pipe-line sales, and tank-car sales from refinery and from producing fields through these offices. All of these sales are normally made by the general office through bids or contracts. Ordinarily no warehousing of merchandise is done at these points. While other wholesale functions may be performed by general sales offices, the emphasis is always upon the selling activity.

VI. Manufacturers' sales branches are wholesale outlets owned and operated by manufacturers, largely or entirely for the distribution of their own products. The purchasing aspect is stressed little, since most or all of the merchandise is manufactured by the parent concerns. The emphasis is largely upon the selling function. In fact, some manufacturers' sales branches carry no stocks and confine their activities to the promotion of sales and the securing of actual orders, while others operate in every detail like bona-fide service wholesalers but with little or no emphasis on buying. The demarcation is rather sharp as between certain trades, the steel business illustrating the former type and the meat packing business the latter.

VII. Cooperative sales agencies include both the sales agencies and the central marketing associations which have been set up by a number of agricultural cooperatives to facilitate the sale of the products of the members. Such sales agencies are located in both the producing areas and in the larger marketing centers, and act as selling units of federated or centralized cooperatives.

VIII. Agents and brokers specialize in the performance of buying and/or selling functions either in domestic or foreign trade. Their chief additional function lies in furnishing market information. They may represent a single client or a group of clients, either buyers or sellers, and they may specialize in the lines of merchandise handled. Their compensation is in the form of fees or commissions.

(a) Auction companies, as used in the Wholesale Census of Distribution, are concerns that sell by the auction method at wholesale. Sales are conducted under definite rules and are usually made to the highest or best bidder. Such concerns do not take title to the goods but handle them for clients on a commission or fee basis. They provide a place for the public inspection and sale of merchandise consigned to them and may even, on their own responsibility, extend credit to purchasers. F. o. b. auctions differ mainly from the "delivered" auctions, herein defined, in that such establishments do not handle the goods which they sell for their clients.

(b) Brokers are wholesale middlemen whose function it is to negotiate transactions between buyers and sellers. They act as agents for their principals, who are usually wholesalers or producers, although they sometimes represent retailers as well. Brokers may represent either buyers or sellers in a given transaction, or both. (In certain fields brokers may concentrate largely on the buying of goods for their clients. In such cases they are frequently designated as buying brokers.) They do not take title to the goods to which their negotiations apply except incidentally, nor do they ordinarily have possession of the goods or finance their clients.

Brokers are not bound to any set of clients but operate freely in the wholesale field. Their relations with any one client are not continuous as they are in the case of selling agents or manufacturers' agents. The remuneration of brokers is in the form of a commission or fee, based upon the value of the goods or upon the quantity of merchandise involved in the transaction. The quantity unit may be a carload, a ton, a bag, a box, or some other package. In addition to performing the functions of buying or selling, their chief function consists in advising their clients as to market conditions; for knowledge of such conditions, of sources of supply, and of outlets is their main stock in trade. Normally brokers do not handle the invoices and have nothing whatever to do with the amounts invoiced. (In the grocery trade it is difficult to distinguish between brokers, selling agents, and manufacturers' agents, the three terms frequently being used in a synonymous manner.)

(c) Commission merchants handle commodities consigned to them on a commission basis. As commission merchants they do not take title to the goods they sell for their clients. It is their practice, when the goods require it, to maintain places of business suitable for the handling, conditioning, warehousing, and selling of merchandise. In some few lines of trade, commission merchants, or commission houses, act purely as shippers' agents, but in most lines of business they combine some merchant business with commission dealing. When acting in the capacity of agents for their principals, it is the practice of commission merchants, when the goods require it, to prepare them for the market, to sell them at the best possible prices, and to remit the proceeds after deducting commissions and other charges. In this capacity commission merchants always represent sellers. When the emphasis is placed, however, on outright purchasing, so-called commission merchants become in reality wholesale merchants and are so classified for the purpose of the Census of Distribution. Thus, a concern is classed as a commission merchant only when the sales handled on a commission or consignment basis exceed 50 per cent of the total volume reported.

In this classification are also included factors which specialize in the raw-cotton and textile trades and in the distribution of naval stores, since their operations are similar to commission merchants. In the textile trade they are generally commercial bankers who specialize in financing the mills, a function which they originally combined with that of selling. This is very unusual at the present time, consequently for purposes of the Census of Distribution the term "factor" is applied only to operators in the raw-cotton trade, and to those other factors who actually engage in the distribution of goods, since purely financial or service establishments are not covered by this census. In the raw-cotton trade the functions performed are analogous to those of commission men. The factors are located in the central markets and receive the cotton on consignment from the producing areas. Their work consists, first, in advancing funds to the shipper, who may be a grower but who is usually a country buyer or cotton merchant; second, in warehousing or storing the goods; third, in grading; and, finally, in selling the goods. Factors receive commissions for their services.

(d) Export agents include commission houses, and agents and brokers, who specialize in selling to foreign countries.

1. Export commission houses generally represent foreign clients and perform the purchasing function for them. Such houses normally confine their trading to foreign countries and receive their income in the form of commissions. In addition to the buying function they secure a certain amount of market information for their foreign clients. They also perform the incidental functions connected with the technic of shipping. Not infrequently they also sell for American firms goods consigned to them.

Export commission houses frequently specialize in markets rather than in commodities, handling almost every conceivable class of merchandise for which there is a demand in the foreign markets in which they operate. The same observation applies to a number of export merchants and other export agencies.

2. Export agents and brokers include export brokers, customs brokers, export manufacturers' agents and export selling agents. Export brokers, in so far as they differ from ordinary brokers or export agents, are considered as performing for the export trade the ordinary functions of brokers in domestic trade. Customs brokers are also included in this classification. Their business is to negotiate transactions for buyers in foreign countries or for importers, on a brokerage or fee basis. They act as intermediaries between buyer and seller, and what they spend is reimbursed to them by the purchasers of the merchandise, usually when the same is delivered. Customs brokers are considered experts in all matters connected with imports and exports, such as duties, consular fees, necessary legal documents, invoices, the tariff laws, and in the proper packaging and routing of goods. Such brokers are commonly found in or near the importing or exporting centers. A group of them may be found, for example, in the cities near the Mexican border, representing largely Mexican buyers of American-made goods. Export manufacturers' agents may be defined as manufacturers' agents specializing in export trade. (See Manufacturers' agents). Export selling agents are selling agents engaged in export trade, presumably selling the entire output of the mills they represent. In actual practice, however, there is probably little distinction in foreign marketing between export selling agents, export manufacturers' agents, and export brokers. In fact, these titles are uncommon and are generally shortened to the title "export agents."

(e) Import agents include commission merchants, manufacturers' agents, and selling agents who represent foreign sellers in the American market.

1. Import commission merchants or import brokers specialize in making foreign purchases for a number of clients whose individual operations are too small to justify separate organizations for importing. They also attend to the customs formalities for their clients and operate on a commission basis.

2. Import manufacturers' agents perform the functions connected with foreign trade comparable to those usually performed by the manufacturers' agents in domestic trade. The distinction lies in that the former represent foreign manufacturers. (See Manufacturers' agents.)

3. Import selling agents occupy a place in the import trade analogous to that held by selling agents in domestic trade. They represent the foreign manufacturers. (See Selling agents.)

(f) Manufacturers' agents sell part of the output of certain manufacturers with whom continuous relations are maintained. These agents are limited with respect to (a) territory of operations, and (b) prices and terms of sale. Their principal function is selling, although they may also warehouse some of the goods. The compensation of manufacturers' agents is usually in the form of commissions but sometimes they may work on a salary basis. Manufacturers' agents, as used in this census, usually represent two or more manufacturers, the accounts consisting ordinarily of noncompeting but supplementing lines of merchandise, and are in business for themselves. (This type of middleman is not to be confused with brokers or with selling agents.)

(g) Purchasing agents, commonly referred to as syndicate buyers in the hardware trade, are independent middlemen who buy merchandise for their clients and also supply their clients with market information. They are to be distinguished from so-called purchasing agents employed in manufacturing plants who are not in business for themselves but merely work for a single employer, maintaining no separate purchasing establishments. Purchasing agents, as used in the Census of Distribution, frequently combine orders from a number of relatively small wholesalers or retailers and buy on a larger scale than would be possible for the individual concerns whom they represent. For the very large concerns they are chiefly useful as sources of current information on trade and price developments. They are often paid on a flat rate by their clients.

(h) Resident buyers are purchasing agents, operating primarily in the dry-goods trade. The relationships of both purchasing agents and resident buyers with their respective clienteles are continuous and not intermittent as in the case of dealings with buying brokers. Resident buyers are located in the central markets and are in close contact with manufacturers in those markets and with wholesalers or retailers at outlying points. They normally represent the interests of buyers, although they may also occasionally represent sellers.

(i) Selling agents are independent operators working on a commission basis performing chiefly the selling function. They usually sell the entire output of a given line of goods for one or more manufacturers with whom they maintain continuous relations. In a great many cases they give their clients financial assistance. Selling agents differ from manufacturers' agents in the following respects: (1) They normally handle the entire output of their clients; (2) they may sell everywhere while manufacturers' agents are limited in their territory of operation; (3) they have full authority with regard to prices, terms, etc., while the authority of manufacturers' agents is limited in this regard; and (4) they frequently finance their clients and offer assistance in connection with their advertising and other sales promotion activities. (Selling agents are not to be confused with brokers or manufacturers' agents.)

IX. Assemblers and country buyers of farm products operate at local producing points or in the cities of the producing regions, and are engaged in the purchasing of farm products. Such purchases may be made either from other dealers or direct from farmers. The emphasis of such establishments is on the buying or assembling of merchandise in quantities for economical handling and shipping, usually direct to manufacturers, commission men, or car-lot wholesale merchants.

This group of assemblers includes both firms and individuals doing business on their own account, that is outright purchasing and selling, and those operating on a salary or commission basis for some central organization. The chief distinction between some of these different types, as their names indicate, rests upon the commodities which they handle.

Under this general grouping are shown assemblers, cooperative marketing associations, country buyers on salary or commission, cream stations, elevators (independent, line and cooperative), milk stations, and packers and shippers.

(a) Assemblers are of two principal classes:

1. Independent buyers of agricultural commodities, who as a rule forward or consign these commodities to wholesale receivers or distributors in another and usually a larger market or to manufacturers or processors. The larger independent concerns often maintain offices at a central point and frequently have a considerable group, line, or chain, of buying stations. These buying stations in turn are grouped under the second classification, "Country buyers on salary or commission."

2. Assembling and packing plants are maintained at the larger points of concentration in the producing regions by some of the large handlers of agricultural commodities. Some of these assembling plants are branches of the parent concern, while others are subsidiaries. Examples of these are the poultry and egg packing plants maintained by some of the packers as well as by some of the other large poultry and egg dealers, and the fruit and vegetable assembling houses maintained by some of the larger distributors in that field. This class of assemblers, like independent assemblers, secures a large share of the commodities which they handle from country buying stations in the smaller cities and towns in their region or district.

Large quantities of agricultural commodities are purchased by local storekeepers or others regularly engaged in some other business. These establishments have not been included under this heading, nor have they been designated as country buyers on salary or commission. Provision has been made, however, to cover their functions as assemblers of agricultural commodities in connection with special reports on the assembling and distribution of agricultural commodities.

(b) Cooperative marketing associations is a classification that is, for the most part, self-explanatory. These associations are formed largely by producers of farm products for the purpose of disposing of their goods at the most advantageous prices for the mutual benefit of all the members. In addition to the actual selling of the products, they often grade, pack, store, finance, and in some cases advertise the commodities they handle. Such associations may also buy for the members various supplies, such as feed, seed, fertilizer, and coal.

In so far as possible to ascertain the essential facts from the schedules this designation is used for the local cooperatives, both those disposing of their products direct and those marketing through a central association or agency. As stated above, these central associations or sales agencies are classified as cooperative sales agencies.

Thus the locals of a State cooperative marketing association are classified as cooperative marketing associations, whereas the State marketing association itself is classified as a cooperative sales agency. This latter term is not in all cases perhaps strictly correct, but it was impossible to set up for the general reports a special classification for each kind of contractual or other relationship between locals and district, State, or regional cooperatives. Yet at the same time it was necessary to make use of some means to indicate that the locals and the central organizations operate on different levels or planes of the distribution process and in order to facilitate as much as possible the elimination of duplication in sales figures.

Cooperative cream and milk stations were classified as cream or milk stations, but their cooperative character is shown in that part of the tabulation dealing with character of organization and will also be shown in the special reports on the assembling and distribution of agricultural commodities.

It should be pointed out that the decision as to whether an organization was or was not cooperative in character was based on there port on the schedule as submitted.

(c) Country buyers on salary or commission is a special subgroup under "Assemblers and Country Buyers" comprising those country buyers operating on a salary or commission basis which were not covered by some special business classification, as elevator (line), cream station, or milk station. In interpreting this classification it should be constantly kept in mind that the Census of Distribution was essentially on an establishment basis, and hence it is not to be expected that schedule reports were re ceived for all of that rather large group of the country buyers who have no established place of business.

Some persons and firms engaged in the handling of agricultural commodities conduct part of their business on an outright purchase and sale basis, and some of it as agents for others on the salary or commission basis. Wherever the information was available they were classed either as assembler or as country buyer on salary or commission, depending on the way in which the greater share of the business was handled.

(d) Cream stations may be operated by creamery companies, either independents or cooperatives, or by individuals or firms, or by cooperative groups of producers. Some cream stations give their full time to the purchase and shipping of cream. In other cases, eggs, poultry, and other country products are also purchased by cream stations. However, the great majority of cream stations are operated in conjunction with some other business, frequently a retail store, an elevator, or a general country buying business, including cream, eggs, poultry, and in some cases, hides, skins, fruits, and vegetables.

(e,f) Elevators—Independent, line, and cooperative.—The term "elevator" as used in the Census of Distribution refers to those elevators purchasing and handling grain either on their own account (independent); or for their principals (line). Storage elevators, both public and private, and grain warehouses were not included since this census did not cover the warehouse and storage business as such. Consequently, the major part of the establishments classified as elevators are located in the grain producing regions, and for the most part are found in towns of less than 10,000 population.

The independent elevator is as a rule locally owned and probably in the majority of cases, the company has but one elevator. Frequently, however, such independent elevator companies expand their business by purchasing one or more additional elevators, usually in adjacent towns.

The term "line elevator" refers to one of a group or chain of elevators operated by a firm of grain dealers or by a mill or milling company. There is considerable variation in the number of elevators operated by different elevator companies ranging from only a few in some cases to several hundred in others.

Strictly speaking, the use of the term "line elevator" should be confined to those elevators whose operations are directed from a central office. But it is conceivable that an independent elevator company may own two, three, four, five, or more elevators, each of which operates to all intents and purposes as a single elevator. For census purposes, however, it was necessary to classify any group of three or more elevators as a line elevator company; hence independent elevator companies operating more than two units were thus automatically designated as line elevators.

Cooperative elevators may be either independent or line, since some farmers' cooperative elevator associations operate a number of elevators. No separate type of establishment classification was used for these cooperative elevators, either single or multiple; but they were grouped as cooperative marketing associations and designated as elevators under the kind of business grouping.

In addition to the purchasing, handling, storage and shipping of grain, elevators in some sections of the country transact a greater or less amount of retail business. In fact, in some of the older grain States the retail sales of some of the elevators now exceed the total value of the grain handled. Unless the value of the grain handled equaled 50 per cent of the total sales reported, such elevators were considered as retail establishments.

(g) Milk stations are collecting stations or depots located in fluid milk-producing regions. They may be maintained by city milk distributors, by cooperative milk associations, by independent individuals or firms, or by local milk producer cooperatives. In some sections of the country, milk stations collect milk for manufacturers of dairy products rather than for city fluid milk distributors.

(h) Packers and shippers.—This classification was used in connection with the two following classes of business, first, producers, except assembling of fruits and vegetables, and second, packing and shipping of sea foods. In connection with the assembling of fruits and vegetables this classification covers establishments engaged in the packing and shipping of fruits and vegetables, including the sale thereof, but has not been used for establishments which are simply forwarding agents. It also includes some growers who, in addition to their own products, pack and ship for neighboring producers. The Census of Distribution does not include the sale of fruits and vegetables or other agricultural products by farmers or other producers who sell only the products of their own farms or orchards unless such sales were made through separate distributing establishments. This is considered as an agricultural process and is covered by the Census of Agriculture.

X. Wholesaling manufacturers consist of establishments engaged primarily in manufacturing and secondarily in wholesaling of goods purchased from other producers for resale, without alteration in form. All establishments classified under this heading produced during the year 1929 between 50 per cent and 90 per cent of the goods sold through them. A good illustration of a wholesaling manufacturer is that of a meat packer who, in addition to selling from his own plant goods produced in that plant, also sells certain quantities of butter and eggs which were purchased for resale in the same form and without further processing. Provision has been made for the presentation of data for another group that may be termed "manufacturing wholesalers" namely, wholesalers who engage to a limited extent in the manufacture of some of the goods which they sell, although their principal business is that of buying merchandise from manufacturers not connected with their wholesaling business. In other words, manufacturing wholesalers operate primarily as wholesale merchants and secondarily as manufacturers.

CHAPTER III—GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

EXPLANATION OF TERMS

Number of establishments.—Under this designation are included all establishments canvassed in 1930 that were in existence during the year 1929, even though their operations extended over but a portion of the year covered by the census. It does not include establishments that came into being after the census year nor does it include all establishments which discontinued operations prior to 1930.

Number of employees.—Under this heading are included all paid employees, among them being hired executives, salesmen, and all office, warehouse, and other employees. Proprietors and firm members are not included under number of employees, regardless of whether such proprietors and firm members were on the pay roll or whether they received their compensation in the form of net profits. In the majority of cases the establishments reported the average number of employees carried on the pay roll during any part of the year. This was especially true of establishments engaged in seasonal trades, such as packers and shippers of fruits and vegetables, tobacco-buying establishments, etc., which operated only two or three months during the year.

Salesmen.[1]—In this item are included all persons engaged primarily or entirely in selling goods, regardless of the type of salesman or method of remuneration. It includes house, city, traveling, and resident salesmen who may be missionary salesmen, specialty salesmen, or may handle the general line of merchandise of the house they represent. It also includes an indefinite number of so-called agents who have given part of their time to selling, although an attempt was made to eliminate such employees from the salesmen classification whenever the schedules clearly indicated that to be the case. It does not include those sales representatives who are in business for themselves representing a number of different firms whose goods they sell on a commission or fee basis. Such organizations have been classified as manufacturers' agents, selling agents, brokers, etc., as the circumstances seemed to justify, in accordance with the definitions given in Chapter II.

Executives.[1]—This item includes presidents, vice presidents, general managers, secretaries, treasurers, superintendents, office managers, credit managers, sales managers, buyers, and others who are normally regarded as belonging to this category.

All other employees.[1]—This item consists of all paid employees other than salesmen and executives, except as shown in the footnote.

Total expenses (not including cost of merchandise).—Total expenses include all expenses paid during 1929 covering: (1) salaries and wages, as defined below; (2) expenses of salesmen, exclusive of salaries, wages, commissions, and bonuses; (3) rent, if any, paid for premises during the year; (4) interest, if any, paid during the year for money borrowed for the business; and (5) all other expenses paid during the year. In this report are presented statistics only for total expenses and salaries and wages. Detailed analysis of rent and interest, described below, are shown only in the trade series bulletins.

Salaries and wages.—These items represent, respectively, the total compensation of salaried officers and employees and the total compensation of wage earners. In other words, they include all amounts actually paid to hired executives, salesmen, and other employees. The income derived by proprietors and firm members is not included in the figures for these items. Because of the irregularity in reporting the number of employees as indicated in the explanation under number of employees and on account of the inclusion of all kinds of business in the totals shown, total salaries and wages should not be used to compute the average wages per employee.

Expenses of salesmen.—This item covers all traveling or other expenses of a miscellaneous nature incurred by salesmen, but not including salaries, wages, commissions, and bonuses.

Rent.—Rent was reported only when the place of business was not owned by the reporting establishment. The amounts shown under this item reflect the sums actually paid during the year for the premises occupied by the reporting establishment. No rent was reported separately when the premises were owned by the reporting establishments. In such cases, however, most of what ordinarily constitutes rent was no doubt included under all other expenses, since owners of real estate used for business purposes must pay taxes, usually charge interest on the investment, and incur other expenses incident to the maintenance of the property in usable condition. All of these items normally make up the bulk of what is paid to an owner of real estate in the form of rent when such property is rented or leased. For this reason the items rent and all other expenses, respectively, are not comparable between different establishments. Total expenses and other items of expense, however, are comparable as between establishments, since they were reported for each and every place of business.

[1] No space was provided on the automobile schedule or on the schedule used for establishments in towns and cities under 10,000 population for a classification of employees under salesmen, executives, and all other employees. For this reason the data on salesmen and on executives are incomplete and represent merely the number of salesmen and their salaries, and the number of executives and their salaries for wholesale establishments operating in cities of 10,000 population and over, exclusive of the automobile business. For the same reason, the data under All other employees, Table 10, include an unknown number of salesmen and their salaries, and an unknown number of executives and their salaries, employed by establishments in the automobile trade or in wholesale establishments in towns and cities under 10,000 population.

Interest.—This item included only the amount of interest paid during 1929 for money borrowed to operate the business, whether used for the purchase of goods, for building construction, or for other purposes directly connected with the operation of the business. It does not include interest charges made by the reporting firm on its own invested capital. For the same reasons stated above under rent the item interest is not comparable between different establishments.

All other expenses.—This includes all items of expense incurred by the reporting firms with the exception of those items specifically enumerated, namely, wages, salaries, commissions, and bonuses; expenses of salesmen; interest paid; and rent paid during the year. Under all other expenses are included a large variety of items such as postage; stationery supplies; telephone and telegraph; heat, light, water, and power; advertising; insurance; taxes; losses from bad debts, etc. Neither capital investment (land, buildings, fixtures, etc.), nor the cost of goods purchased for resale are included under this or any item covered in this report.

Stocks on hand.—This item covers the cost or replacement value of merchandise on hand December 31, 1929, or on the nearest inventory date. This inventory figure can not be used to compute the rate of stock turnover without first making essential adjustments. To compute the rate of stock turnover properly, it is necessary, first, to have a true average inventory or an inventory carried normally throughout the year, and, second, to reduce the sales and inventory figures to the same basis, namely, to take both of them either at cost or at selling prices. Neither of these conditions obtains in the census figures. The inventory is taken in most cases as of December 31, which may or may not be representative of the average stocks carried during the year in any given line of business. Furthermore, stocks on hand are given approximately at cost prices while net sales are shown at selling prices. To reduce the net sales to a cost basis it would be necessary to know the gross margin or mark-up on the merchandise which is not available in the census figures since no question was asked to secure data on net profits which are necessarily a part of the gross margin.

Returned goods and allowances.—These figures are deductions from gross sales due to goods being returned by customers or allowances and adjustments made as a result of customers' complaints. The causes for such returns and allowances may be defective merchandise, substitutions, errors on the part of customers, errors on the part of order fillers, on approval sales, etc. Before arriving at the net sales figure it is necessary that returned goods and allowances be deducted from gross sales invoiced at the time of the original transaction.

Net sales are derived by deducting from gross sales the value of goods returned by, and allowances made to, customers. Purchases made by country buyers of farm products and other buying agencies have been treated as equivalent to net sales and are included in the total under this heading. In the case of brokers and agents operating on a commission basis it was frequently necessary to compute net sales on the basis of average commission rates or fees charged. Where the reporting brokers or agents failed to make these computations themselves the average rates of commission charged by them during the year were supplied to the wholesale census, where the computations were thus effected. This method was necessitated by the fact that many brokers and agents maintain records only of commissions received and do not have actual sales figures.

Credit sales.—By this term is meant all sales made on any other than a strictly cash basis. However, the question on the schedules relating to credit sales was apparently not always so interpreted with complete uniformity. Consequently, the data shown under this heading include only credit sales which were actually reported on the original schedules or which were subsequently adjusted wherever possible as a result of correspondence.

Sales to ultimate consumers (at retail).—This represents sales made to ultimate consumers who buy goods for personal use or for household consumption. While such sales are normally made by retail stores and by some manufacturers who have gone into direct selling by mail or through house-to-house canvassing, wholesalers sell certain amounts to such consumers on a retail basis. Wholesalers who sell substantial quantities to consumers at retail are commonly known as semijobbers.

Sales to industrial consumers.—These are sales made by non-food wholesale establishments to manufacturers, oil-well companies, mine operators, and public utilities. Such sales consist largely of machinery, equipment, supplies, and raw materials not intended for resale in the same form.

Character of organization.—Under this heading the various legal forms of business ownership are classified. The most important types are the individual proprietorship, the partnership, and the corporation. In addition, data are shown for cooperative associations, common law trusts, and other types of business organization.

Marketing units.—Wholesale concerns as well as retailers frequently operate more than a single establishment. These multiunit businesses, commonly called chains, are shown in this volume, grouped according to the number of establishments under a single ownership; such establishments may be located in a single community or State or in several communities throughout the country.

Size groups.—In classifying wholesale establishments according to volume of business, nine size groups have been set up as follows:

GROUP NUMBER	NET SALES
I	Under $25,000.
II	$25,000–$49,999.
III	$50,000–$99,999.
IV	$100,000–$199,999.
V	$200,000–$299,999.
VI	$300,000–$399,999.
VII	$400,000–$499,999.
VIII	$500,000–$999,999.
IX	$1,000,000 and over.

Proprietors and firm members.—This item includes owners and part-owners of wholesale business enterprises of the single proprietorship and partnership type actively engaged in the operation of the business, irrespective of whether such owners or partners received stipulated amounts of remuneration or merely had drawing accounts and shared in the net earnings of the business. The compensation of these persons has been omitted from the statistics in this report on salaries and wages.

Commodity sales.—The wholesale schedules or returns in the majority of cases show not only the total volume of business transacted by the reporting firms, but also the amount of business done in each of a number of commodities or commodity lines. This makes it possible to determine how much business is done by hardware wholesalers, for example, as well as how much of their sales are in hardware, how much in automotive equipment, how much in electrical goods, and how much in certain other major commodity lines normally handled by hardware firms. Some returns failed to give a breakdown of sales by commodities largely because such information was not available and could not be compiled by the reporting firms without considerable trouble and expense. This fact gives rise to a term known as "commodity coverage" explained below. Some returns show a breakdown by commodities in greater detail than others. For this reason commodities have been classified into major commodity lines and detailed commodity items. In this report are presented data by major commodity lines only, being shown for each of the following commodities:

Aluminum ingots, bars, sheets, shapes, tubes, and castings.
Automobiles, trucks, and tractors, new and used (including passenger automobiles and special purpose vehicles, such as busses, fire apparatus, ambulances, etc.).
Automotive equipment, parts, and accessories.
Bakery products (cakes, biscuits, crackers, etc.).
Barbers' equipment and supplies.
Books, magazines, and newspapers.
Brick, tile, and terra cotta.
Building materials not classified elsewhere, such as wall board, roofing paper, etc.
Building materials (ornamental metal), (including fire escapes, elevator cages, grilles, metal lath, etc.).
Building stone, slate, and concrete products.
Cameras and photographic supplies.
Canned goods (food products), (including canned fruits, vege tables, fish and sea foods, meats, etc.).
Cement, lime, and plaster.
Chemicals, industrial and heavy, such as soda ash, sulphur, calcium, coal-tar products, resin, and other synthetic organic chemicals.
Chemicals, refined, and/or related products (such as explosives, celluloid, spirits of turpentine, bulk disinfectants, insecticides, printers' inks, drying compounds, etc.).
China, glassware, and crockery.
Cigars, cigarettes, and tobacco (except leaf).
Clothing and furnishings, men's and boys' (including men's and boys' suits, overcoats (except fur), work clothing, and all furnishings except shoes).
Clothing, women's and children's (including women's and misses' coats, suits and dresses, millinery and millinery supplies, and hosiery; children's and infants' wear; and other women's and misses' wearing apparel, except shoes and furs).
Coal (anthracite and bituminous) and coke.
Confectionery and soft drinks.
Copper ingots, bars, sheets, shapes, etc.
Cotton, raw (including linters).
Dairy products and eggs.
Drugs and drug sundries (including druggists' chemicals, pharmaceuticals, proprietary medicines, druggists' rubber goods, and drug sundries not elsewhere classified).
Dry goods not elsewhere classified.
Electrical appliances, equipment, and supplies (including storage batteries, motors and generators, electrical fixtures, lighting and power supplies, and household appliances).
Farm products not elsewhere specified (such as bristles and hair, cut flowers, nursery stock, etc.).
Feeds, mixed and other.
Fertilizer and fertilizer materials.
Fish and sea foods, fresh and processed.
Food products not elsewhere specified.
Fruits and vegetables, fresh and dried.
Furniture, wooden and metal (including household furniture and office and store furniture and fixtures).
Furs (dressed) and fur clothing.
Glass, sheet.
Grain (wheat, corn, oats, etc.).
Groceries (including sugar, flour, coffee, lard and lard substitutes, cereal preparations, rice, tea, oleomargarine and butter substitutes, extracts and spices, pickles, preserves, etc., but does not include canned goods).
Hardware (including builders' hardware, heavy hardware, light hardware, tools and cutlery, etc.).
Hay, straw, and alfalfa.
Hides, skins, and raw furs.
Horses and mules.
House furnishings and supplies (such as carpets, rugs, linoleum, objects d'art, pictures, kitchen ware, etc.).
Iron and steel and products (except as classified), (including rolled iron and steel products; pig iron; scrap iron and steel; rough castings and forgings; iron and steel pipe and tubes; and wire, wire rope, screening and fencing).

Jewelry, silverware, clocks, watches, precious stones, and precious metals.
Junk and scrap.
Lead pigs, bars, sheets, and pipe.
Leather and cut stock.
Livestock (other than horses and mules).
Logs, poles, posts, hewn ties, pulpwood, and cordwood.
Luggage, saddlery, harness, and gloves (except dress gloves).
Lumber, rough, dressed, and finished.
Machinery, equipment, and supplies (industrial) (including textile machinery; mining, quarrying, and pumping machinery; construction machinery; power plant machinery and equipment (except electrical); machine tools (power driven); belting, hose, packing, and mechanical rubber goods; pipe fittings and valves; and rope, cordage, and twine).
Machinery, equipment, and supplies (farm and garden).
Meats and meat products, fresh and cured.
Musical instruments, accessories, and parts (except radios).
Nonferrous metals and products not classified elsewhere (including nonferrous alloys and ferroalloying materials).
Nonmetallic minerals (crude) and their products not listed elsewhere (such as salt, asbestos, chalk, clay, graphite, etc.).
Notions and dry goods (small wares, such as ribbons, laces, threads, etc.).
Office and store machines and equipment.
Oils, animal and vegetable.
Optical goods.
Ores, metallic.
Paints, varnishes, and lacquers.
Paper (wrapping, book, wall paper, paper board, etc.).
Paper products (such as paper boxes, bags, cups, dishes, napkins, towels, patterns, etc.).
Petroleum and petroleum products.
Piece goods, all kinds.
Plumbing and heating equipment and supplies.
Radio sets, parts, and accessories.
Refrigerators, mechanical (household and commercial).
Rubber, crude.
Sand, gravel, and crushed stone.
Secondhand merchandise (all kinds).
Seeds (field and garden) and bulbs.
Sheet metal work (such as steel garages, heating and ventilating supplies (metal work); metal roofing, metal storage tanks, etc.).
Shoes, boots, and other footwear (including rubber).
Silk, raw.
Soaps (household and toilet) and toilet preparations.
Sporting goods (including arms and ammunition).
Stationery and stationery supplies.
Surgical, dental, and hospital equipment and supplies.
Textile products not classified elsewhere (such as imitation leather, knit gloves, bagging, cotton cloth, clippings, waste, garment labels, shoddy, etc.).
Tin, block.
Tobacco, leaf.
Toilet articles.
Toys and games.
Wood products (such as millwork, shingles, caskets, wood fibers, moldings, reeds, etc.).
Wool, raw (in the grease, scoured, or carbonized).
Yarns (all kinds).
Zinc bars, plates, shapes, and sheets.
Miscellaneous commodities.

EXPLANATION OF TABLES

The tables in the United States Summary are similar in contents and numbering with the same tables in the individual State reports for purposes of comparison. Exceptions are made in Tables 5, 6, 7, and 12. The first three of these are shown separately in the State reports. They are combined in the United States Summary only for a more effective presentation. The information contained, however, is comparable. Table 12 in the State reports lists the number of establishments by kind of business (based on the 24 standard trade groups) for all cities within the State having 20,000 or more inhabitants. Such a table would not be feasible in the United States Summary. A different Table 12 (sales made to retailers by other retailers) has been inserted to preserve comparability in numbering between State reports and the United States Summary. All text tables have been given Roman numerals to distinguish them from the comparable State and United States tables.

Table 1, summary of wholesale trade by principal classifications.—This table presents a summary of the wholesale trade by 24 trade groups for all types of wholesale establishments combined, so that a few of the essential items resulting from the census may be seen at a glance. It shows the number of wholesale establishments; number of employees, both male and female; salaries and wages; total operating expenses; stocks on hand at the end of the year (at cost); and net sales.

Table 2, wholesalers only, by kind of business.—This table presents the most essential statistics for a group of wholesale establishments designated by the term "wholesalers only," which excludes brokers, agents, and certain other types of organizations operating in the wholesale field. It shows the number of establishments; the number of employees, male and female; salaries and wages; total expenses; stocks on hand at the end of the year (at cost); net sales; credit sales; sales to ultimate consumers (at retail); and sales to industrial consumers.

The first section of the table indicates what types of organizations are included under wholesalers only, and gives summarized information in one line totals for each of the types of establishments covered by the term. The leading type of establishment in this group consists of wholesale merchants of the conventional type, often called service or full-function wholesalers. For many trades or kind of business classifications, wholesale merchants are the only type of organization under wholesalers only. This is particularly true of those lines of trade which have little or no exporting or importing and where newer types of wholesalers have not entered the field.

Table 2 is analytical rather than a general summary, since the main body of the table shows in considerable detail statistics for the various kinds of business in which wholesalers only operate. Kind of business statistics are given in complete detail for the United States in 88 classifications. Similar information is given in the State reports for the State as a whole and for cities down to and including 100,000 population. This table can not be presented for cities having less than 100,000 inhabitants without disclosing data for individual establishments.

Table 3, wholesale trade, by kind of business.—This table differs from Table 2 in that it includes all types of wholesale establishments instead of giving information for wholesalers only. Data are presented for practically all of the 343 kind-of-business classifications in the United States Summary. In the State reports, similar data are shown for the State as a whole and for the larger cities under as many of the kind-of-business classifications as may be shown without revealing the operations of individual establishments. For the other cities with a population down to and including 100,000 inhabitants the kind of business is shown in a maximum of 88 classifications which are major subdivisions of the 24 trade groups. This procedure was dictated by the necessity of preventing disclosures, and at the same time showing as great detail as possible. For the same reason, kind of business statistics in this table are shown only by 24 groups for cities of 20,000 to 100,000 population and in one line totals for cities of 5,000 to 20,000 population.

Table 3 is an elaboration of Table 1 and differs from it in the following respects: (1) It includes, in addition, statistics on the extent of credit sales, sales to ultimate consumers (at retail), and sales to industrial consumers; and (2) it shows the statistics in complete detail by kind of business instead of presenting them by 24 major trade groups as in Table 1. It is, thus, possible to measure the importance of specialized trades and to afford business men an opportunity to compare their figures with those for similar enterprises. For example, Table 1 shows totals for the "Chemical, drug, and allied products" trade, whereas Table 3 gives similar data for concerns specializing in chemicals, for those engaged in the general line drug business, and for a number of specialized trades in the drug field included under the general group of "Chemicals, drugs, and allied products."

Table 4, types of distributors.—From Table 4 it is possible to determine the relative importance of service wholesalers, limited function wholesalers, brokers, agents, assemblers, cooperatives and newer types of wholesalers such as cash-and-carry houses, drop shippers, and wagon distributors. This table shows the number of establishments; number of employees, male and female; salaries and wages; total expenses; stocks on hand at the end of the year (at cost); net sales; credit sales; sales to ultimate consumers (at retail); sales to industrial consumers; and the average sales per establishment. This information is given for each type of wholesale distributing organization. While Table 3 presents statistics by kind of business classifications, this table shows data by types of distributors referred to in this census as types of establishments. It shows the relative importance of each type of wholesale organization. Knowledge of this point, particularly when applied to a given kind of business as per Tables 5, 6, and 7, may lead to the adoption of sounder policies on the part of manufacturers and other producers in the selection of channels for the distribution of their goods. It should enable retailers and industrial consumers better to choose their sources of supply. To others it shows the wholesaling mechanism and its constituent parts in the proper perspective, substituting facts for guesses. In other words, it should be an aid to more intelligent competition.

Total expense figures, employees, and salaries and wages given in this table also throw light on the relative efficiency of the various types of wholesale middlemen and other distributing organizations. This table also shows to what extent each type caters to ultimate consumers and to industrial consumers, respectively. The statistics in Table 4 are given in detail for the United States. The State reports give similar information for each State as a whole and for cities of 100,000 population and over. For incorporated towns and cities having 20,000 to 100,000 inhabitants, data are shown only for two main divisions, namely, wholesalers only and all other types of wholesale establishments.

Tables 5, 6, and 7, types of distributors, by kind of business.—Tables 5, 6, and 7 present the types of wholesale establishments by the various kinds of business. They are shown separately for the States and certain cities in the State reports, but are combined in the United States Summary. Table 5 shows the number of establishments; Table 6, the net sales; and Table 7, total expenses. From these tables it is possible to determine the number of different types of wholesale distributors operating in a given kind of business and their net sales and expenses, and conversely, the different kinds of business in which a particular type of wholesale middleman or other organization functions. Table 5 presents the kind of business in 88 classifications. For Tables 6 and 7 in the State reports only 24 classifications can be used without disclosing data for individual establishments. Table 5 is of peculiar value because it shows not only the number of wholesale organizations existing in a given community or State, but it gives this number by kinds of business and types of organization within each kind of business. The importance of these statistics is enhanced by those shown in Table 6 which indicate how significant each type of organization is in every kind of business in which it is found, while Table 7 throws light on the relative costs of doing business on the part of each type of wholesale establishment in every kind of business.

Table 8, form of business organization.—Table 8 presents wholesale trade statistics by the character of the business unit. Similar information is shown in the State reports for the State as a whole and for cities of 500,000 population and over. The number of establishments, employees, salaries and wages, total expenses, and net sales are shown for individual proprietorships, partnerships, corporations, cooperatives, and for all others. From this table the significance of the corporate form as compared with the earlier individual and partnership types of organizations can be ascertained, also the importance of the cooperative form of organization. Relative efficiency as shown by total expenses is indicated and it is also possible to compare wages paid by the different types of business organizations, and the extent to which each type of organization affords a field for employment.

The statistics in this table are significant only in a general way. Their chief value is in indicating the extent to which the principal forms of business organization are emphasized in the wholesale field, the relatively large scale of operations on the part of corporations and the opportunities for proprietorships and partnerships, which may be regarded as synonymous with small scale enterprises. Substantial variations for any one form of business organization are, no doubt, to be found in different lines of trade and divergent methods of operation within a single trade. These differences between lines of trade and methods of operation even within a single trade may explain many variations in salaries and expense ratios as between the different forms of business organization.

Table 9, wholesale chains.—In Table 9 are presented statistics for multiple-unit organizations operating in the wholesale field. Establishments have been grouped in this table on the basis of the number of wholesale outlets under a single ownership. The number of establishments, the net sales, and total expenses are shown for each of the 24 major trade groups in columns indicating the number of wholesale establishments under a common ownership. Thus it is possible to determine for a given trade, such as the grocery business, the number of establishments in each area which represent single unit businesses, the number of establishments which represent wholesale concerns operating 2 establishments, 3 to 5 establishments, 6 to 25, 26 to 100, and over 100 establishments. A comparison of the net sales and the ratio of total expenses to net sales as between single-unit establishments and multiple-unit establishments shows the relative importance and differences in operating costs of each group. Similar information is presented in the State reports for the State as a whole and for cities with 500,000 inhabitants or more.

Table 10, employment, by kind of business.—Table 10 gives an analysis of employment in the wholesale field, broken down by kind of business. Proprietors and firm members, and total paid employees, divided into male and female and into executives, salesmen, and all other employees are shown, together with salaries and wages for the last three divisions. The number of employees on the 15th of April, July, October, and December indicate the extent of seasonal fluctuations in employment. The table reveals the significance of wholesale trade as a source of employment to both men and women. It further indicates the relative position of the different kinds of business as sources of employment. Similar information is shown in the State reports, for the State as a whole, and for cities of 500,000 population and over, the information being given for as many of the 88 major kind-of-business classifications as possible, without disclosing data for individual establishments.

Table 11, size of establishments.—This table presents the number of establishments, the net sales, and the total expenses of operation for wholesale merchants by size of establishment based upon net sales. This information is given for the United States by 88 classifications. In the State reports, it is shown for each State, and for cities of 500,000 population and over, by each of the 24 trade groups. This table permits the comparison of small and large sized establishments in a given trade as to operating costs. It further indicates the differences existing between trade groups as to average size of establishment and operating costs, and may point out the optimum size for each kind of business. For the purposes of this tabulation only wholesale merchants (including jobbers), importers, and supply and machinery distributors have been included, in order to lend homogeneity to the statistics.

Table 12, number of establishments for cities, by kind of business.—This table as presented in the State reports shows the number of establishments by kind of business (based on the 24 standard trade groups) for all cities having 20,000 or more inhabitants. Complete information for these cities could not be shown in Table 3 without disclosing data for individual establishments. Table 12, therefore, is designed to give as much summary information as is possible.

Such a table for the United States Summary would be impracticable. Another table "Sales Made By Retailers To Other Retailers, By States" has been substituted. This table shows the amount of merchandise sold by retailers to other retailers on the wholesale basis, or the extent to which retailers engage in semijobbing.[1] This information is given by States and is based on the retail distribution kind of business classification. Coordination between the wholesale and retail kinds of business is, however, possible with the proper interpretations.

Table 13, commodity sales.—Wholesale distribution by commodities is designed primarily to satisfy the wants of two major groups in our economic society.

[1] The extent to which wholesalers engaged in semijobbing is shown on Tables 2 and 3 by kind of business, and Table 4 by type of wholesale establishments under the column headed "Sales to ultimate consumers (at retail)."

One of these consists of wholesale merchants and others engaged in wholesale distribution. A second and equally important group comprises producers and manufacturers. In addition to these two groups, commodity information has considerable significance for professional economists and consultants in market research, for advertising and research agencies, and similar groups.

The chief objective in presenting commodity statistics is to afford a picture of the wholesale channels through which commodities flow on their way from producer to consumer. The wholesaler can thus ascertain what lines of commodities are carried by other wholesalers and in what proportions these commodities enter into the sales of the wholesale group. Such information affords a basis for comparing his own distribution of sales with that for the group as a whole in which he operates and likewise for competing groups. Thus, for example, a wholesale merchant may be interested in determining not only the commodity lines carried by wholesale merchants in his own community and in other communities, but he may also find it of importance to study the lines carried by manufacturers' sales branches, chain store warehouses, and other types of wholesale establishments which are in competition with him. Further, an electrical wholesaler wishes to know to what extent wholesalers in other lines of merchandise handle electrical goods, and specifically, what types of electrical merchandise are so handled.

Manufacturers may glean from these statistics the total volume of sales of the particular commodities which they are producing. This information affords a basis for comparing their volume of output with the total for the country thereby giving them a concrete idea of the relative share of the market which they may reasonably hope to secure. This is not all, however, since the manufacturer is likewise interested in knowing who sells the commodity which he is producing. The commodity information presented by the wholesale census makes it possible to work out a more scientific method of distribution, since it provides facts on commodity outlets with respect both to the trade groups which handle the various commodities and the types of wholesale establishments which operate in those trade groups. It is thus possible for the manufacturer of electrical goods, for example, to determine the extent to which wholesale establishments which specialize in electrical goods handle such things as radios, electrical refrigerators, storage batteries, and the like. The analysis will further show which other trades handle these commodities but do not specialize in them. Thus, the automotive trade, the hardware trade, and the general merchandise trade may each market substantial quantities of electrical commodities although the electrical wholesale trade itself may account for the bulk of the business. Moreover, within a given trade group, such as the electrical trade, it is possible to determine with greater accuracy than ever before the extent to which manufacturers maintain their own wholesale establishments and the volume of commodity sales which such establishments handle. Comparison can thus be made between manufacturers' wholesale sales outlets, wholesale merchants, and such other types of establishments as chain store warehouses, cash-and-carry wholesalers, agents, brokers, and the like. The relative importance of each of these types as sales outlets in each trade group may thus be determined. Many other purposes will occur to economists and statisticians engaged in market research and analysis which may be served by the commodity tabulations.

The commodity statistics are based upon facts submitted to the Census of Distribution on the schedules, which provided for an analysis of sales by commodities. In order to allow for the different degrees of detail which occur in the records of individual merchants, the commodity breakdown provided for information by major commodity lines, on the one hand, and detailed commodity sales under major lines, on the other. Thus, for example, the food products schedule provided for commodity information on canned goods as a major line, and under canned goods had provision for a further breakdown into canned fruits, canned vegetables, canned fish and sea foods, canned meats, and other canned goods not listed elsewhere. Excellent reports on the major commodity lines were furnished by most wholesale establishments, and in addition, many firms gave a considerable amount of detailed commodity information.

Provision was made on the schedules for 92 major commodity lines and 162 detailed commodity items, or a total of 254 combined major and detailed commodity classifications. Commodity statistics presented in this report for the United States are limited to the 92 major commodity lines listed on pages 51–52. The statistics in Table 13 are first summarized to show (1) the 24 trade groups or principal kind of business classifications; (2) the net sales by such trade groups; (3) the volume of commodity coverage by trade groups, i. e. the amount of business in a trade group which was reported by commodities; and (4) the per cent of commodity coverage for each of the trade groups, or the proportion of total sales which was reported by commodities in each of the groups, expressed in percentages.

Following the brief summary which shows the percentage of commodity coverage for each of the trade groups, the detailed commodity statistics are presented. The first item in this table is the total net sales by all trades for the United States or for a given State. Under this item is given the volume of sales which was not reported on a commodity basis. These sales are subtracted from total net sales, leaving a remainder which is known as "reported commodity sales." This part of the table lists in alphabetical order the 92 major commodity lines, or as many of them as appear in a given State. These commodity lines appear in boldface type, followed by an explanation in italics of the per cent of reported commodity sales; that is, the per cent which the total sales of the particular commodity constitute of the reported commodity sales appearing at the head of the table. This affords a basis for determining at a glance the relative importance of a particular commodity.

Under each commodity line are shown: (1) The total sales of that commodity; (2) the trade groups which reported that commodity; (3) under each trade group, the types of wholesale establishments, together with the volume of sales of that commodity reported by each type. Thus, the commodity "confectionery and soft drinks," for example, is shown in the Delaware report to constitute 1.1 per cent of reported commodity sales with a sales volume of $1,233,000. This commodity line is handled by the "Chemical, drug and allied products" trade, the "Food products" trade, the "Grocery and food specialty" trade, and the "Tobacco and tobacco products" trade. Under the "Chemical, drug and allied products" trade, wholesale merchants are reported to have sold $25,000 worth of confectionery and soft drinks. Under the "Food products" trade, manufacturers' sales branches reported sales of $468,000 worth of confectionery and soft drinks; in the "Grocery" trade, wholesale merchants reported sales amounting to $461,000; in the "Tobacco and tobacco products" trade, cash-and-carry wholesalers accounted for $26,000, and wholesale merchants for $253,000 of the sales of the commodity line known as confectionery and soft drinks. It is thus possible to determine quickly and easily the wholesale trade channels through which confectionery and soft drinks are sold.

In this connection, the term "commodity coverage" is of sufficient importance to merit special explanation. In the first place, not all of the wholesale schedules gave complete information on sales by commodities. Had all reports been broken down on this basis, the sales analyzed by commodities and total net sales would have been the same. Since the records in some establishments were such that no accurate breakdown could be secured by commodities, total commodity sales in any given trade are usually less than total net sales in that trade. The term "commodity coverage" is used by the Census of Distribution to express this fact. This expression simply means the extent to which commodity sales compare with net sales or the proportion of net sales that is broken down by commodities. Thus, if the net sales for a given trade are $100,000,000 while commodity sales in that trade total $90,000,000, the commodity coverage is 90 per cent.[2]

The percentage of commodity coverage has peculiar significance for those who are interested in the construction of an estimate of total commodity sales. To illustrate, it may be desirable to determine the total volume of canned goods which was sold in the United States. Canned goods are sold in the "Grocery" trade and in several other kinds of business. In the "Grocery" trade the commodity coverage is 83.3 per cent and the total net sales are $9,537,323,000, which means that the commodity sales in the "Grocery" trade accounted for $7,942,524,000. Of this amount $1,136,401,000 was reported in canned goods. Since the "Grocery" trade in general had a commodity coverage of 83.3 per cent, it is reasonable to assume that the $1,136,401,000 of canned goods reported constitutes 83.3 per cent of the total volume of canned goods sold in the "Grocery" trade. It is thus possible to estimate the total volume of canned goods sold in that trade and, in like manner, the total volume of canned goods sold in the "Food products (not elsewhere specified)" trade, the "General merchandise" trade, and in other trades, thus arriving at an approximation of the total volume of canned goods sold through all trades in the entire United States. This figure would require considerable adjustment, however, due to the fact that there are a number of types of wholesale establishments included which sell to other wholesalers. Deduction of sales by agents, brokers and other types which are known to sell largely to the wholesale trade is essential, if duplication is to be eliminated. Furthermore, it is necessary to point out that the percentage of commodity coverage is not shown separately for each type of establishment but only for the trade group, and must therefore be computed before an accurate estimate can be made. For an approximation, however, it may be assumed that the general commodity coverage for the entire United States of 89.1 per cent applies to each type.

[2] Actual over all commodity coverage for the United States was 89.1 per cent, as shown in Table 13.

UNITED STATES SUMMARY

The Census of Wholesale Distribution, taken in 1930 and covering operations for the year 1929, is based upon schedules submitted for 169,702 establishments operating on a wholesale basis, as defined in Chapters I and II. These establishments reported a volume of business amounting to $69,291,547,604. To transact this amount of trade, it required the full-time services of 1,605,042 paid employees (exclusive of proprietors and firm members), of whom 1,310,969 were male and 294,073 were female employees. The total expenses incurred in the operation of the wholesale establishments (not including the cost of merchandise, capital investment, or net profit), were $6,135,625,029, or 8.85 per cent of net sales. Approximately one-half (49.05 per cent) of all expenses consisted of salaries and wages paid to employees other than proprietors and firm members. The stocks on hand at the end of the year for all establishments combined had a cost or replacement value of $5,246,739,657, the equivalent of 7.57 per cent of the sales for the year. This does not mean, however, that the stocks bore the same ratio to sales for the entire year, since in many cases end of year inventories were heavier than usual while in others they were considerably lower than the average amount of stocks carried throughout the year. Of the total net sales, 56.3 per cent, or $39,012,802,022, were made on a credit basis, and $689,817,082 were made directly to ultimate consumers at retail.

Wholesale distribution, by kind of business.—Totals for wholesale trade are interesting and essential, yet they are inadequate for application to business problems. To enhance their value, it becomes necessary, first, to present the statistics by kinds of business or lines of trade. Consequently, all establishments have been divided into 24 kind of business groups and these groups have been further broken down into 88 major classifications, which, in turn, were subdivided into 343 minor kind of business classifications.

When thus analyzed, we find that the food and grocery trade groups constitute the most important kind of business with 42,902 establishments and net sales of $19,047,643,161, or 27.49 per cent of the total (see Table 1). The major lines of merchandise comprising these groups are confectionery and soft drinks, dairy products, poultry and poultry products, fish and sea foods, fresh fruits and vegetables, meats and meat products, and staple and fancy groceries. Separate statistics for each of these lines are shown in Table 3 for all types of organizations combined and in Table 2 for wholesalers only.

Next in importance to the food and grocery trades is the farm-products trade, consisting of all farm products other than food and farm supplies. This trade accounted for 30,473 establishments with net sales of $12,031,034,292, or 17.36 per cent of the total. The dry goods and apparel trade with 10,518 establishments and 8.59 per cent of total business was third, followed by the metal and minerals trade with 3,620 establishments and 8.08 per cent of the business, and the petroleum products trade with 23,008 establishments and 4.86 per cent of total net sales. These five trades together accounted for slightly under two-thirds (66.38 per cent) of all wholesale trade. Seven additional trades reported sales between one and four billion dollars each. Ranked in the order of their importance as judged by sales volume they are: The machinery equipment and supplies (except electrical) trade; the electrical trade; the automotive trade (exclusive of petroleum products); the lumber and building materials trade; the chemical, drug, and allied products trade; the tobacco and tobacco products (except leaf) trade; and the paper and paper products trade. Four more trades, namely, the furniture and house furnishings trade, the farm supplies (except machinery and equipment) trade, the hardware trade, and the plumbing and heating trade, reported sales in excess of $800,000,000 but less than a billion dollars each. The remaining 7.14 per cent of the total volume of wholesale trade was divided among the following seven trades, ranked in their order of importance except for the "all other" trade group: The general merchandise trade, the iron and steel scrap and other waste materials trade, the jewelry and optical goods trade, the amusement and sporting goods trade, the leather and leather goods (except gloves and shoes) trade, the forest products (except lumber) trade, and the all other trades group.

An examination of the statistics in Tables 2 and 3 at once reveals the high degree to which wholesaling permeates the various lines of trade, instead of confining itself, as is popularly believed, to so-called jobbing lines such as groceries, hardware, drugs, and dry goods. In fact, there is hardly a trade in which wholesale establishments do not occupy some degree of importance. Furthermore, this universality in use of wholesale institutions is not confined to old-established industries. Even the newest industries, as exemplified by radios and electric refrigerators, are selling largely through wholesale establishments of various types.

These same tables also show the extent to which wholesale establishments either specialize or carry a general line of merchandise. From them it is possible to ascertain for the first time the exact degree to which this situation obtains. It is interesting to note, for example, that of the 1,487 establishments of all types operating in the drug field 638 carried a general line of drugs and drug sundries, while 849 were specialty concerns. Of the latter, 308 carried limited lines of drugs proper, 159 handled drug sundries exclusively, 217 confined themselves to patent medicine lines, 51 specialized in druggists' rubber goods, 37 limited their business to sanitary supplies and insecticides, and 77 specialized in alcoholic beverages. Despite the fact that the specialty establishments in the drug field constituted over 57 per cent of all the establishments in the trade, they accounted for but a little over one-fourth of the drug business, which means that specialty houses or short-line distributors, at least in the drug trade, operated on a much smaller scale than general line drug firms.

Wholesale distribution, by type of establishment.—In addition to classifying the wholesale establishments by kind of business, they are also classified by the type of operation or nature of the functions of the reporting firms, as defined and explained in Chapter II. An examination of the schedules disclosed the existence of 43 types of establishments, but data are shown herein for only 35 types, the remaining types, more or less insignificant in volume, being merged with types to which they are closely akin. Data for each of the 35 types of establishments are shown in Table 4 and the relative importance of the major types is graphically depicted on Chart I.

For all kinds of business combined, wholesale merchants of the conventional or familiar variety are the most important type by far, both in the number of establishments and the volume of business reported. They comprise 70,953 establishments, or 41.81 per cent of all establishments, doing $24,689,811,423 of business, or 35.63 per cent of the total. Second in importance from the standpoint of net sales were manufacturers' sales branches, with 9.73 per cent of the establishments and 21.38 per cent of the sales. The closely related district and general sales offices maintained by manufacturers accounted for another 174 establishments and $1,328,156,909 of business, or 1.91 per cent of the total.

Bulk tank stations in the petroleum field were second in the number of establishments with 19,587 plants, or 11.54 per cent of all establishments. Their net sales, however, constituted but 3.03 per cent of the total. In contrast with this may be cited the 559 chain-store warehouses (0.33 per cent of the establishments) with net sales of 2.79 per cent of the total. Agents and brokers of various types as a group numbered 18,388 with net sales of $14,256,695,241, or 20.58 per cent of the total. Commission merchants were the most important type in this group, with 3,479 establishments and $4,694,933,831 net sales. Brokers were a close second, followed by selling agents and manufacturers' agents.

In the field of agricultural marketing, assemblers and country buyers of farm products constituted the most important group of wholesale organizations. They operated 34,144 establishments (20.1 per cent of all establishments), doing a volume of business of $4,629,880,874, or 6.68 per cent of the total. The most prominent single type of organization in this group were elevators with 8,181 units and 1.73 per cent of the total business. This was followed closely by cooperative marketing associations with 4,079 units and 1.63 per cent of total business.

The foreign trade of the United States is well represented by 2,262 importers with a volume of business of $1,808,523,826, and 754 exporters with sales of $1,507,824,410. In addition, export agents, brokers, and commission houses, of which there were 260, accounted for a volume of sales amounting to $398,559,446, and 85 import agents contributed another $57,157,859. The totals presented herein by no means represent the entire volume of foreign trade, since the census is based upon establishments and does not cover exports or imports made directly by manufacturers and other producers. It merely involves the volume of business handled through wholesale establishments specializing in foreign trade.

Aside from chain-store warehouses the newer types of wholesale establishments are shown to be relatively much less important than is generally supposed. Among them are 756 cash-and-carry wholesale establishments with sales amounting to $178,808,645. Mail-order wholesalers numbered 41 establishments with net sales of $45,986,532. The most important of the so-called newer types or limited-function wholesalers consisted of drop shippers or desk jobbers, of whom there were 583, with net sales of $242,268,843.

The data by type of wholesale establishment, as shown in Table 4, indicate, first, the relative importance of each functional type of organization and, second, the variations in employment, total expenses, and other items covered in this report as affected by the type of organization. Above all, they point out the dominant position which the older types of service wholesalers still occupy in the face of the growth and development of newer types of wholesale institutions.

Much variation is to be noted, as among the different types of establishments, not only in the total volume of business, but also in the average size of the establishment based on net sales. Thus, while the average sales per establishment for all types of establishments were $408,318, they were as high as $9,815,405 for general sales offices and as low as $103,800 for cooperative marketing associations. Even within a closely allied group of organizations important differences in average size may be found. The average sales per establishment for importers, for example, amounted to $1,999,767, as against $1,075,405 per establishment for exporters. Among the newer types of wholesalers we find average sales per establishment as high as $1,121,623 for mail-order wholesalers and as low as $109,866 per establishment for wagon distributors.

Type of establishment, by kind of business.—Important as it is to analyze wholesale trade by type of establishment or by kind of business, it is much overshadowed by the importance of an analysis of the statistics in both ways at the same time. With this in mind, kind of business statistics are presented in Table 2 separately for a group of establishments which are designated as wholesalers only, whereas in Table 3 are shown data by kind of business for all types of establishments combined. In the group under wholesalers only are included wholesale merchants of the conventional service type, as well as the newer types of wholesalers, and exporters, importers, and supply and machinery distributors, all of whom take title to the goods which they handle and are independent in ownership or control from either manufacturers or retailers. The most essential statistics, however, consisting of the number of establishments, net sales, and total expenses are shown in Table 5 for each type of wholesale organization by each of 88 major kind of business classifications.

As already pointed out, important differences may be noted in various operating factors, because of differences in kind of business, or because of differences in the type of organization. Substantial differences may also be found in the relative importance, for example, of a single type of wholesale organization in different lines of trade. To illustrate, converters operate only in the dry goods and apparel trade, in the farm products trade, in the paper and paper products trade, and in the textile and textile materials (other than dry goods) trade. In no other trade are converters to be found. An examination of the statistics shows that of the 204 converters with net sales of $215,431,516, 188 operated in the dry goods and apparel trade doing a business of $208,051,000. In other words, 96.6 per cent of all the business done by converters was transacted in the dry goods and apparel field. To this must be added the four converters with $2,183,000 net sales operating in the textile and textile materials (other than dry goods) field, which means that converters virtually confine all of their activities to what may be termed the textile industries. Next in importance are the 11 converters with $4,750,000 of business operating in the hide, skin, and fur business.

On the other hand, wholesale merchants seem to occupy important positions in all 88 lines of trade without a single exception, but their relative importance varies considerably. Of the 1,789 establishments operating in the hardware trade, for example, with net sales of $866,158,000 wholesale merchants numbered 1,213 with net sales of $704,345,000, or 81.3 per cent of the total. In the petroleum trade, however, bulk tank stations predominated, so that of the 23,008 establishments specializing in the handling of petroleum products, bulk tank stations numbered 19,587 with net sales of $2,101,129,000, or 62.4 per cent of the total.

From these figures it becomes possible to ascertain to what extent, if any, certain types of organizations are operating in a given line of trade. Moreover, it is possible to determine the relative costs of doing business as between the different types in all lines of trade, and for a single type of organization in different lines of trade. While total expenses for wholesale merchants for all lines of trade are 12.5 per cent of net sales, they are 16.9 per cent for the electrical trade and but 5.6 per cent for the farm products (other than food and farm supplies) trade. Great variations may be found in total expenses for wholesale merchants or any other type of organization even within a single line of trade, depending upon their degree of specialization. In the automotive trade, for instance, the total expenses for wholesale merchants are 15 per cent of net sales, but they vary from 10.8 per cent for wholesalers selling automobiles and automotive vehicles to 23.7 per cent for wholesalers handling a general line of automotive equipment. Wholesalers of tires and tubes, also in the same group, reported a cost of doing business of 20.5 per cent of net sales.

Operating expenses in wholesale trade.—The Census of Distribution presents a more comprehensive analysis of operating costs in wholesaling than has ever before been available on so wide a scale. The 169,702 wholesale establishments in the United States expended a total of $6,135,625,000 in operating expenses. This figure, which constitutes 8.85 per cent of total net sales by all wholesale establishments, has significance only in a general way as indicating the net wholesale margin or the amount which wholesalers add to the cost of the goods sold as a result of money outlays incurred in the handling of goods on a wholesale basis. Since no figures were secured on net profits or on the cost of goods sold, the actual wholesale mark-up can only be estimated.

Total operating expenses include $3,010,130,000 in salaries and wages which constitutes nearly half of the total expenses. Salaries and wages are divided among salesmen, executives, and all other employees. Salesmen received $942,225,000, executives $385,222,000, and all other employees $1,682,683,000. (See Table 10.) All other expenses, which include expenses of salesmen, rent paid, interest paid, and such miscellaneous items as taxes, insurance, office supplies, warehouse supplies, etc., amounted to $3,125,495,000.

There is a wide variation in total expenses between the different types of wholesale establishments for all trades and for the various types of establishments in the different trades. As pointed out above, the average operating expenses for all types of establishments combined was 8.85 per cent of net sales. The range of expense ratios by types of distributors, however, for all kinds of business in which they operate shows a variation from a low of 1.3 per cent for brokers to a high of 22.6 per cent for mail-order wholesalers. (See Table 4.) Great variations are also to be noted for a single type of distributor as between different trades. (See Table 5, 6, 7.) Wholesale merchants, for example, show an average cost of 12.5 per cent of net sales, but the range is from 1.6 per cent for the raw silk business to 33.5 per cent for the toilet articles and preparations line of trade.

In the case of cash-and-carry wholesalers where the average cost is 5.7 per cent of net sales, there is also a wide variation between trades. In the metals and metal work trade, cash-and-carry wholesalers show an average cost of 2.8 per cent of net sales; in the food and grocery specialty trade, the ratio is 3.0 per cent. At the other extreme, the cash-and-carry wholesalers in certain trades reported very high operating expenses. For example, in the machinery, equipment, and supplies trade, the ratio of expenses to net sales is 40.2 per cent and in the service equipment and supplies trade, it was 51.7 per cent. Wagon distributors with average operating costs of 18.8 per cent of net sales shows a variation from 30.3 per cent in the dairy products trade to 5.4 per cent in the book, periodical, and newspaper trade.

Manufacturers' wholesale branches have an average operating expense of 9.4 per cent for all trades ranging from 2.3 per cent for iron and steel and 2.5 per cent for the entire metals trade group to 36.5 per cent in the wall-paper trade and the optical goods trade and 39.5 per cent in the book, periodical, and newspaper trade.

Chain store warehouses report average operating expenses (including the cost of supervision of retail stores) of 4.3 per cent of net sales based on wholesale values and not on the selling prices of the retail stores. In the grocery and hardware trades, the ratio is 3.3 per cent. In contrast with these low costs chain stores warehouses in the book, periodical, and newspaper trade show operating cost of 35 per cent of net sales. The lowest operating costs of all are shown by brokers with an average of 1.3 per cent of net sales for all trades. The very low costs of 0.2 per cent are shown by brokers in the dairy products trade and in the hide, skin, and fur trade, whereas costs in excess of 20 per cent of net sales are reported by brokers in the plumbing and heating trade and in the camera and motion pictures equipment trade.

Not only is there considerable variation in the cost of doing business of different wholesalers in different trades, but the character of the business organizations also seems to be responsible for distinct differences. Incorporated companies, for example, show average operating costs of 10.0 per cent of net sales as contrasted with 6.22 per cent for the individual proprietorship, 5.0 per cent for partnerships, and 4.11 per cent for cooperatives. These differences can not all be imputed to the respective forms of the business unit since there is considerable variation, even for a single form of business organization, as between kinds of business and types of operation. It is probable, however, that such variation is fairly evenly distributed among the different forms of organizations and that the resulting differences are reflections in a large measure of the various forms of business organization. (See Table 8)

The lower operating expenses reported by proprietorships and partnerships may be largely accounted for in two ways: In the first place, they employ relatively fewer outside people. The proprietors and partners are themselves actively engaged in their respective businesses, but their compensation, even when they receive a stated salary, is not included in the operating expense figures. In the second place, it is possible that economies are effected as a result of the business being constantly under the direct and personal supervision of the owners.

One of the most important contributions, which has been made by the Census of Wholesale Distribution, lies in the analysis of the homogeneous wholesale merchants group by kind of business and by size of the enterprise. These statistics throw much light on the theory of cost variation. If all wholesale merchants be taken together the average operating cost is 12.15 per cent. (See Table 11.) Small scale establishments or those with sales under $25,000 per year report operating costs over twice as high as the average, or 26.89 per cent of net sales. As the average size of business increases the total expense ratio decreases to a low of 9.66 per cent for establishments with average sales in excess of $1,000,000 per year. This evidence that operating costs decline as the size of the business increases is not uniform for all trades. Wholesale merchants handling general-line groceries, for example, have average operating costs of 9.12 per cent of net sales. For the very small scale establishments the figure is 22.65 per cent. This decreases to a low of 8.31 per cent for establishments selling between $200,000 and $300,000 worth of goods per year and thereafter increases, with one exception, to 9.54 per cent for the large scale establishments.

It is significant, however, in the case of grocery wholesalers that there is a very small variation in operating costs for establishments in the $100,000 to $200,000 group, the $200,000 to $300,000, the $300,000 to $400,000 group, and the $400,000 to $500,000 group. In the case of the hardware trade costs appear to decline consistently as the size of the business increases, the lowest cost being 18.22 per cent for concerns with sales in excess of $1,000,000. This compares with an average of 18.65 per cent for all general line hardware wholesalers and a high of 38.74 per cent for the very small scale establishments.

The drug trade shows that general line wholesale merchants with sales between $300,000 and $400,000 per year have lowest operating costs, the figure being 13.45 per cent of net sales, as contrasted with an average of 14.1 per cent, a high of 30.43 per cent for establishments selling less than $25,000 per year, and 13.9 per cent for establishments with sales in excess of $1,000,000. In the case of general line dry goods wholesalers the lowest costs are reached in the same group as in the case of the grocery trade, namely, the group with sales between $200,000 and $300,000 per year. The cost for dry goods wholesalers decreases from 26.08 per cent for small scale establishments to 13.08 per cent, and thereafter increases steadily (with one exception) to 14.99 per cent for establishments selling more than $1,000,000 per year. The exception is the group with sales between $300,000 and $400,000 which show a high cost of 16.44 per cent. The average for the dry goods trade is 14.91 per cent.

The following tabulation shows these variations in detail:

Operating Expenses as a Per Cent of Net Sales for Wholesale Merchants Handling a General Line of the Merchandise Indicated, by Size of Business

Net sales	All trades	Grocery	Hardware	Drug	Dry goods
Total	12.15	9.12	18.65	14.10	14.91
Under $25,000	26.89	22.65	38.74	30.43	26.08
$25,000 to $49,999	21.79	13.58	26.84	26.40	17.50
$50,000 to $99,999	19.41	10.91	20.86	19.26	14.96

From the standpoint of number of wholesale marketing units under a single ownership, it is interesting to note that there is also considerable variation in operating costs. Businesses operating between 6 and 25 wholesale establishments show average operating costs of 8 per cent of net sales. (See Table 9.) Single unit establishments are next lowest with 8.5 per cent of net sales. The businesses operating two establishments report operating costs of 9.3 per cent, whereas those operating between 3 and 5 establishments and between 26 and 100 establishments report total expenses of 9.5 per cent of net sales. Business concerns which operate more than 100 establishments each have highest costs of all with 11.8 per cent of net sales. This information may be used in connection with the analysis of wholesale merchants by size of business to gain an insight into the relative costs of large and small scale business organizations. The costs vary, of course, between trades in the case of multiple unit organizations just as they do in the other instances.

Wholesale trade as a source for employment.—The 169,702 establishments engaged in wholesale distribution gave employment to a vast army of people, both men and women. A total of 1,695,814 people including employees, proprietors, and firm members were engaged in wholesale distribution in 1929. (See Table 10.) This number constitutes a group over half as large as the population of Chicago and greater than the total population of the city of Detroit. Of the total, 90,772 consisted of proprietors and firms members, 52,451 of whom maintained businesses of their own, the remainder consisting of partners in partnership organizations. Of the 1,605,042 employees proper, exclusive of proprietors and partners, 1,310,969 were male and 294,073 were female. It is interesting to note that there was considerable variation in the employment of women in the different kinds of business. For all trades the per cent was 18.3 of total employees. This percentage varied from 6.8 per cent in the petroleum products trade to 36.6 per cent in the amusement and sporting goods trade. Other variations in the per cent of female employees to total are shown below.

Female Employees as a Per Cent of Total Employees in Wholesale Trade

	Per cent
All trades	18.3
Amusement and sporting goods trade	36.6
Drugs (general line)	25.3
Dry goods (general line)	23.9
Groceries (general line)	15.5

Petroleum and petroleum products trade	6.8

A further analysis of the composition of the employment in wholesale trade reveals that there were 354,722 salesmen, 65,739 executives, and 1,184,581 miscellaneous employees, including office help, warehouse employees, truck drivers, and other employees.

People engaged in wholesale trade as paid employees received in salaries and wages the very considerable total of $3,010,129,535, a figure approximately 30 per cent as great as the cash income received by farmers for crops and livestock in the same year. Of this total salesmen received $942,224,539 or an average of $2,656. Executives received $385,221,732 or an average of $5,859. All other employees received the remaining $1,682,683,264 which amounted to an average salary of $1,420.

There is very considerable variation in the ratio which total salaries and wages bears to net sales in the various kinds of wholesale trade. Total salaries and wages for all trades consisted of 4.3 per cent of net sales. The following tabulation shows the variation which the ratio of total salaries and wages bears to net sales between a few of the trades:

In addition to the foregoing facts, which indicate the significance of wholesale trade as a source of annual employment, it may be pointed out that there is some slight variation in seasonal employment. The variation for total wholesale trade ranges from 1,497,114 employees on the pay roll on April 15, to 1,445,921 on July 15, to 1,562,111 on October 15, and to 1,568,529 on December 15. For all wholesale trades this seasonal variation is very slight, which means that wholesale trade tends to have a stabilizing influence upon employment. However, it must be pointed out that there is considerable variation among the different trades reflecting roughly the seasonal characteristics of various industries. Thus in the farm products trade, for example, seasonal employment varies from 80,779 on April 15 to 109,492 on December 15. Wholesalers of cotton report an even wider variation in employment ranging from 8,359 on April 15 to 9,200 on July 15, increasing to 15,928 on October 15, and then dropping back to 13,981 on December 15. In the leaf tobacco trade the variation is from 13,000 in April to 18,000 in October and to nearly 31,000 in December.

Credit as a factor in wholesaling.—All wholesale establishments combined reported sales on a credit basis to the extent of $39,012,802,022, which constituted 56.3 per cent of net sales. (See Table 4.) For wholesalers only, the amount of credit business was greater in proportion to sales, the per cent being 62.19. The extent to which the various types, included in the wholesalers only classification, extended credit varies considerably, ranging from 15.5 per cent for cash-and-carry wholesalers to nearly 90 per cent for converters. Wholesale merchants (service wholesalers) for all trades reported 63.13 per cent of net sales on a credit basis. Exporters showed a very low per cent of credit sales (29.02 per cent) due. Not only do we find variations between different types of wholesalers, but also in the different trade groups. Wholesalers of automobiles and automotive vehicles, for example, extended practically no credit, the reported amount being less than 1 per cent of net sales. At the other extreme, a number of trades reported credit sales of approximately 90 per cent or more including the wholesalers of piece goods, raw silk, house furnishings, etc. (See Table 2.) The extension of credit sales by wholesalers indicates the degree to which wholesale establishments perform the function of financing business by extending credit to retailers, industrial consumers, and other wholesalers to whom they sell. They perform valuable services to their clients and also to the manufacturers and producers who would otherwise have to bear the credit burden.

Inventories of wholesale establishments.—One of the primary functions of wholesale distribution is the maintenance of the surplus reserves of commodities at strategic points throughout the Nation. The extent to which wholesale establishments perform this function is indicated in part by the statistics showing stocks on hand at the end of the year. For 1929 all wholesale establishments maintained a total of $5,246,739,657 in inventories or 7.5 per cent of net sales. (See Table 3.) Wholesalers only accounted for the largest per cent of this total, maintaining inventories to the extent of $3,382,558,373 or 11.44 per cent of their net sales. Of this group wholesale merchants of the typical variety constituted the most important reservoir for stocks of merchandise. They maintained 11.69 per cent of their net sales in their warehouses at the end of the year 1929. At the other extreme we have such types as drop shippers and agents and brokers whose inventories were very low, amounting to 1.04 per cent and 1.40 per cent of their net sales, respectively. (See Table 4.)

It is interesting to note that manufacturers' sales branches carried substantial inventories amounting to $968,157,211 or 6.54 per cent of net sales. Chain store warehouses maintained stocks valued at $98,840,-141 or 5.12 per cent of net sales. Bulk tank stations in the petroleum trade carried inventories of $158,532,136 or 7.54 per cent of net sales. The assemblers and country buyers of agricultural products reported inventories of $293,497,185, of which assemblers proper accounted for $175,379,615. In this same group cooperative marketing associations had stocks of but $36,499,380 or 3.23 per cent of their net sales. The closely related cooperative sales agencies which constitute the central marketing organizations of cooperatives maintained stocks of $9,656,245, or 4.05 per cent of their net sales, indicating that they performed a relatively larger portion of the storage function than the cooperative marketing associations. In addition to these variations between types of wholesalers, there are also substantial variations in the kind of business or trade groups. (See Tables 2 and 3.) This has been indicated above with respect to such trades as petroleum, agricultural commodities, and the manufactured goods.

Outlets for wholesale establishments.—Much confusion in the mind of the layman with respect to the character of our wholesale institutions would be overcome if it were kept in mind that there is as much variety in the nature of the outlets through which wholesale establishments distribute the merchandise which they handle as there is in the case of the manufacturer or primary producer.

Wholesale establishments sell to retailers, to other wholesalers, to the ultimate or home consumer, and to industrial consumers. There is, of course, a considerable variation in the extent to which different types of wholesalers make use of these different outlets and again there are differences in the kind of trade. Perhaps the best known type of wholesale middleman is the typical wholesale merchant. It is commonly believed that this type of wholesaler sells almost exclusively to retailers. The facts are, however, that wholesale merchants of the typical variety make 15.2 per cent of their net sales to industrial consumers and 2.0 per cent direct to home consumers, leaving 72 per cent to be divided between retailers and other wholesalers. Just what the division of this 72 per cent is, is not definitely known. It is believed, however, that sales to other wholesalers constitute a rather small per cent of the total volume of sales of wholesale merchants.

The total sales by all types of wholesale establishments to industrial consumers amounted to $15,003,922,334, which constituted 29.77 per cent of net sales of those establishments which reported on this inquiry. This figure, of course, varies considerably from trade to trade, being 55.2 per cent for supply and machinery distributors and nearly 100 per cent in trades specializing in iron and steel and other similar industrial commodities. The total volume of sales to ultimate consumers by wholesalers on a retail basis amounted to $689,817,082, which was less than 1 per cent of total net sales at wholesale. For the group known as wholesalers only, however, this figure was 1.8 per cent and as pointed out above was as high as 3.2 per cent for wholesale merchants.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kinds of business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodities was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kind-of-business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities in each classification see complete text, p. 51.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodities was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances of those returns in which gross sales were used as a basis for reporting the sales by commodities.

[1] Credit sales are not on a basis completely comparable to net sales in some kinds of business classifications since certain establishments did not answer this inquiry, and also what constituted credit sales for census purposes was in some few instances interpreted differently by reporting companies.

[2] Includes 2 cash-and-carry wholesalers, 1 drop shipper, 1 mail-order wholesaler, 3 wagon distributors, and 1 cooperative-buying association.

[1] The first part of this table shows the amount of commodity coverage, i.e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that were represented by commodity sales. This information is presented for each of the 24 kinds of business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities included in each classification see complete text, page 51.

[2] The total sales by commodities were in the cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances of those returns on which gross sales were used as a basis for reporting the sales by commodities.

[1] Establishments in most cases reported average number employees on pay roll during 1929, thus figures may not agree with total on specified dates.
[2] Employees not classified on automobile schedules or for establishments in towns and cities under 10,000 population, but are included in total.
[3] The total for dry goods and apparel includes amounts reported for 1 establishment handling Dry goods specialties, 1 dealing in Millinery and millinery supplies, and 2 dealing in Shoes and other footwear. The separate amounts have been withheld to avoid disclosure of individual operations.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kind-of-business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities in each classification, see complete text, p. 51.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodities was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kinds of business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities included in each classification see complete text, page 7.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodities was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances of those returns in which gross sales were used as a basis for reporting the sales by commodities.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kind-of-business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities included in each classification see complete text, page 7.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodities was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances of those returns in which gross sales were used as a basis for reporting the sales by commodities.

[1] The first part of this table indicates the extent of commodity coverage, i. e., the amount and percentage of the total net sales that have been broken down by commodities. This information is presented for each of the 24 principal kinds of business classifications. In the second part of the table the commodities are arranged alphabetically. Under each commodity the sales of that commodity are shown by trades and by types of distributors operating within each trade. For explanation of commodities included in each classification see complete text, page 7.

[2] The breakdown of sales by commodity lines was in some cases reported on the basis of gross sales rather than net sales. For this reason, the commodity sales may in some instances exceed the total net sales by the amount of returned goods and allowances of those returns in which gross sales were used as a basis for reporting the sales by commodities.
